Subject: TOTYO CASE

Dear [redacted],

I am sorry I could not make this available to you immediately as I had to get through the village council to know their concern and meeting resolution on the case. The meeting went well and I have the meeting minutes with me. However, today I attended the Oloipiri Ward Council held at Sukenya, the council was so sorry about that but it gave instructions to the village council to make resolution and a petition concerning the fabricated information in the webs on the coming Friday then forwarded to Ward Council for approval and have the ward petition as well may be by next week. The Councilor promised to convene a meeting immediately specifically on the petition to be forwarded to the concerned places. I am attaching the report
I will furnish you on the process

Asante sana wishing you all the best.
WHEN THE HARASSMENT TURNS TO SCOUTS

It was Sunday 9th December 2012 around 11.00 hrs in the morning when Totyo Kutes and his colleagues were in field training in plants, birds and animals identification with their instructor Onesmo Lucumay just beyond TCL staff camp at Suguro in the East while morning sunshine making green leaves and zebra backs brilliant.

Turning their heads towards the wageni camp, they saw a big herd of cows grazing towards the camp with different melodies of bells hanging on their necks. Of course it was the time the scouts thought to be comfortable, free from cow bells, but it was different. Totyo was asked by his fellow scouts to go after the herd, when he was close to the herd he then found the herder so called Oldupoi and kindly asked him to drive the cows away from the camp then out of the farm as he was committing trespassing. There was no argument on that on the first time but unexpectedly, Oldupoi did not drive away his cows. Totyo went up to wageni camp joined his colleague Pelela for lunch, when they came back, they found again the same herd of cows grazing again towards the camp and this time these two scouts decided to drive them out. As they drove, Oldupoi resisted and stayed in front of the herd and told the scouts not to drive out the cows because the cows were just grazing...in the process of forward and back, Oldupoi said “this is an opportunity I was looking for as you were my target for a long time”. He then came on with his spear and stick beating Totyo before Pelela came over in between.

Totyo and his colleague Pelela, did not revenge as per the order by the Project Manager that no any scout is allowed to beat any herder or cause any fight in the farm.

Totyo reported the incident to his supervisor the same day then reported to police station at Wasso to get Police Form No.3 (PF3), he had treatment at Wasso Hospital, the x-ray result showed that he had crack on his left arm.

Oldupoi was arrested on the following morning 10th December 2012 but his parents, elders and Sukenya village chairman bailed him out the same day. They requested the case to be handled traditionally and accepted by the police under condition that they should report on success or failure after one week.
The Sukenya village Chairman called a meeting on Saturday 15th October 2012, but before the meeting, the elders made a visit to the place of the event to see whether the fight was in or out of the farm, they then proved to be in the farm just 200m away from the wageni camp.
The meeting was held at Sukenya primary school for about five hours with elders and village council leaders who then after deep discussion found Oldupoi guilty and came up with the following resolutions:
1. That Oldupoi is guilty over the following:
   (i) Trespassing into TCL property without owner’s will
   (ii) Refusal to remove cows from the property when he was asked to
   (iii) Attacking TCL scout on his working place
   (iv) Regular illegal gazing in the property
2. That according to the Maasai tradition, Oldupoi was penalized one bull and one lamb for the treatment of the broken bone all to be given to Totyo
3. That Totyo should be reimbursement with the amount of money he spent for hospital and other related costs
4. That no one is allowed to graze in the property without prior agreement with the owner and each elder to announce that to his boys/herders

The second issue in the meeting was about the fabricated information on the case which I availed the copy to the Chairman. The elders seemed to be shocked with the information. They said that was totally wrong as the boy was not beaten anyhow neither by the police nor TS scout as allegedly said, they were surprised that the used photo was taken few months ago and how comes to be used in this recent issue, they further said that the information was absolutely wrong and was fabricated to attract funds from donors, they claimed that there must be an institution that makes business out this especially when they saw somewhere written “donate to PWC to help against grabbing Sukenya land.” They said this an abuse to the village and they are tired of traded for personal benefit through the dispute, that they must stop it.
They then resolved that:
(i) The Chairman shall convene village council meeting immediately to discuss the issue and make petition against the fabricated information
(ii) The Chairman shall again convene village council meeting to form neighborhood committee that will help in conflict resolution like this one

Hi,

Developing on from your comment below: “How do we get this carrying capacity done once and for all?” and overlapping with the idea of a guide school.

I would like to propose an initial data gathering survey that would provide information and records for the following:

1) Court case...evidence that cattle are grazing on the farm every day, going to water, peacefully
2) Livestock carrying capacity assessment and grazing policy/management planning
3) Building up a clear picture and history of who our neighbors are..
4) Clear and accurate understanding of the boundaries
5) A library of accurate maps for the use of SIT and other researchers
6) Preliminary studies for the purposes of establishing a guide school in the area.

There is a young South African who has just finished guiding school wanting unpaid voluntary work for 3 to 6 months, and we have Emmanuel Loru ...Both are available now.

The immediate tasks to support the above would be

1) Boma survey in and around Enashiva. I had an great realization this morning...See attached pictures...One of the whole farm...and one showing the North East corner where we have bomas and farms inside Enashiva. One fast and reliable way to count cattle around the farm reliably is to take pictures from the air (with the microlight) between 6:30 and 7:30am...before the cattle and goats leave the bomas in the morning to disperse to grazing and watering....The layout and huts within the boma will also tell us about family and numbers.. We then compared data from ground surveys for greater detail and accuracy...See attached form. Other data can come from the district gathered from the last census tho it is not very reliable..
2) Cattle and wildlife surveys on the farm over a period of time...
3) Boundary, water sources, vegetation and topographical mapping..
4) Other tasks as appropriate..

While we build this foundation data up, we bring in someone to look at carrying capacities..I do have two people in Kenya who can do this but are expensive..They will need the above data..
Daniel says he has a few local Tanzanian experts who can do this, which, he proposes and prefers, would be a service that he would provide through his consultancy.

I have tasked both ___ and ___ with doing this Boma survey for a year now, using our scout and them coordinating and interviewing, with no results so far. I also asked ___ to do a boma survey within the envelope of his college project which you help fund. Apart from a load of unknown unnamed GPS coordinates on my GPS, and a list of only 6 bomas in Sukenya, with very limited information, I have nothing and no sight of his report/thesis as yet.
This is why I am proposing this as something I can get better progress on.

Please let me know your thoughts and any additional ideas/tasks that you might have. This survey/data research proposal also comes out of a discussion with [redacted] this morning on...“what can we do now to prepare the ground for a guide school/conservation education project...” His answer was to start gathering data on cattle, habitat and people.

Best,

Hi,

Now that [redacted] has answered I had a few questions:

Isn’t this going to be delivered in English or Swahili? Besides the fact that Maanda might take them...what good would we hope to come out of this? We have talked about getting someone to do the carrying capacity of our property and we have never gone anywhere with that. Of course numbers of wildlife go up and down, but if we knew what the land could carry then we could have a better idea of how many cattle could come onto the land...and then we would have to police that number or hope the community gets on board with that “policing”. It seems to me that if we don’t’ know how many cattle will still keep our land safe, why would we suggest that our neighbors can or cannot use the land?

So that brings me back to: How do we get this carrying capacity done once and for all. [redacted] and I can afford this study...it just needs to be done. Or am I off the mark on this one?

Thanks,

Hi [redacted]

This really is a good thing, I totally agree with you that better livestock husbandry practices will reduce pressure for us at Enashiva, but hopefully not in the near future. However just like you put it, I became a bit skeptical in some of the topics that you mentioned like the " mobilizing against land grabbing" actually, while this might back fire on us, we can always find a better way of handling that.

That is, if we decide we take them, then we have to have a pre meeting and seminar to them to give them a brief of what they are going to hear from the symposium, and the characters that will be there, our objective for us will be for them to learn what is best for their livestock and not the NGO's politics. [redacted] is a good friend of mine and my former boss at Heifer Project International, I can also have a chat with him and explain our situation at Enashiva, he can advice us of what to do, or at least tell us what characters will be there.

However, thinking on the other side of the coin, it would be best if we take them as Maanda can take them, so it would be better if we take them.
About establishing the Carrying capacity, I have always been thinking about this and actually thinking very far, that yes we might know the number of livestocks that can graze within Enashiva, but we can’t actually know the number of wildlife, because the property is not fenced wildlife numbers go up and down with seasons, therefore it will be difficult to control over grazing.

Also, I am sure that, just the number of cattle within the periphery of Enashiva are enough to over graze the property, plus the number that will be invited from afar. Actually this is one of those things that we need to think very carefully as if we act on it immediately it might turn to us in a negative way.

Very best regards.

Hi

c.c.

I spoke to [name] last night about about getting an expert to come and assess Enashiva for a the carrying capacity and management livestock/wildlife system. He told me about a symposium he is doing and encouraged us to attend...see below which he sent today.

Sometime back, in a phone call from Maanda, the only direct conversation with her I have ever had...concerning the detention of wood cutters...I threw her a bone...saying that we needed to do some research on livestock carrying capacity within and wildlife conservation and tourism system before we could have any meaningful process of mediation...and mentioned [name]...she said that he was a good man (perhaps the only thing I have ever agreed with her on). I did go back to him on the matter of assessing the carrying capacity within this model but he said he could only help us with how to help community to manage cattle but had no experience of management practices within a wildlife/conservation system.

What would the risks and benefits of sponsoring a group of people (Sukenya?) to go to this... I am cautious of this as history tells us that all efforts at doing this kind of thing have been successful in the event (e.g. Northern Rangeland’s trust visit, Enaboishu team, Manyara Ranch visit) but costly and failed to return any subsequent results as opposition sets out to sabotage and pull apart any momentum for progress. This may change as you may feel that you can protect and build on these efforts for better outcomes whereas Josiah was not able to.

Reasons would be:

1) Improving their knowledge and capacity about their own management of livestock...e.g. the overgrazing issues
2) Improving knowledge about livestock/conservation and tourism coexistence and benefits..
3) Shows genuine respect and support of pastoralism within our surrounding communities..

This engagement is sailing a bit close to the winds of opposition...One of the items is Mobilizing against land grabbing and there will be some radical and hateful people there who may give our sponsored people a hard time...and we could expect some noise on the internet.....But will it help in our move towards a serious partnership with community that accommodates and supports a balanced community conservation model that accommodates pastoralism within and around Enashiva?
The other issue is that it does clash with the FOTZC board visit but if we can get everyone back to Enashiva on the 8th so it would be tight but feasible. I think you, or someone you can rely on to manage any forces against or trying to manipulate our group, would have to accompany the trip.

Please let me know your thoughts..

This is a great letter to read. It is appealing for our land use change.

Hi

Copy for your files...handed to the PS of the Ministry for Lands last week..

It's a follow up of the meeting I had with him on 14\textsuperscript{th} Nov.

Best,
Thomson Safaris Ltd
P.O. Box 6074, Arusha, Tanzania, East Africa
Phones 255-27-250 3318 • 255-27-250 8551 • 255-27-250 8096
Fax 255-27-250 8094

Dear Sir,

Date: Friday, December 14, 2012

In following up our meeting middle of last month, Thank you for your time today to allow me to introduce our dilemma and to update you accordingly.

The dilemma is that Tanzania Conservation Ltd, whom I represent, along with Thomson Safaris Ltd, have purchased land for tourism purposes under TIC from Tanzanian Breweries (TBL) in 2006, but to date we have not been granted the change of land use, thus substantially enabling various interests to frustrate the progress of the investment, to the detriment of the investors concerned, the local area, district and the countries’ attractiveness as a investment destination.

I refer to the certificate of title No. 18163 in respect of Farm No. 373 located at Sukenya Soit Sambu Village, Ngorongoro District containing 5106 Hectares as indicated in the registered Survey Plan No. 36775 duly transferred to Tanzanian Conservation Ltd on 07th March, 2007 vide Document No. 20704 recorded in your Land Registry at Moshi.

That title was handed Mr. Hilu of the Ngorongoro Land Office on 20th November 2011 as per the copy of the delivery book entry below. Strangely, the title cannot be found and application for a duplicate has been filed, a necessity that will bring much objection and actions by NGOs currently threatening to sue the land department.
The file relating to the application for change of land use resides in your department, and was last reviewed by my staff in the hands of your lawyer, Mr. Mushendwa, and filed under the name Sukunya Farm 373.

In that file you should also have copies of the following:

- a letter Ref. No. NGOR/LD.F.374 of 1st August, 2008 from the Loliondo Municipal Director addressed to the Commissioner for Lands detailing the decision of the Loliondo Counselors in respect of our client’s request of change of use of the said Farm No. 373.

- a letter Ref. No. TIC/B.10/17/32 of 11th December, 2008 from the Tanzania Investment Centre addressed to the Commissioner for Lands expressing a need to expedite Our Client’s application for change of land use in respect of the said Farm No. 373.

Further to the above already on your files I have sent, on 14th August 2012, to Mr. Michael Kamba, Ag. Director of Legal Services, Legal Department, Ministry of Lands, Housing and Human Settlements Development, copies of the following:

- a letter Ref No. GD/P. 20/11/37 of 30th April, 2010 from the Ministry of Tourism and Natural Resources granting permission for the land to be used for Tourism Purposes.

- letters and village minutes making clear their support for TCL and rejection of the legal proceedings currently in play, dated 15th October 2011 and 20th October 2011. Note that the latter apparently states the view of the current village of Soit Sambu following the redrawing of the lines of village areas as referred to in Government Notice No. 180 of 2010 published on 14th May, 2010. This is significant as it is now not clear who is accountable for the proceedings against TCL which names Soit Sambu as the plaintiff, although it largely understood by the community that the entity declared as the plaintiff stands as a proxy for NGO’s directly sponsoring and managing the case.

- Statistics demonstrating the value being generated for the immediate community area by the tourism partner, Thomson Safaris Ltd’s tourism activities, projected to be in excess of $919,000 by next financial year 2013/14.

- List of the community development projects projected to 2013/14 valued at $508,000

An investigation into the land conflict carried out by the Prime Minister’s office in 2010. That report is not available to the public, but we are told it is available to you and that it does contain findings and recommendations regarding the continuation of tourism operations on the property. I appeal to you to obtain a copy of this important report for your purposes.

From the above, it is clear that there is a heavy weight of tangible visible evidence demonstrating that project is beneficial to the area, that all filings, consultations and qualifications are met regarding the change of land use.

Meanwhile, NGOs continue to challenge the authorities, including threats to sue the Land Department itself, and TCL, on the basis that a change of land use has not been granted and this has continued, by design, to increasingly encourage disruption of tourism operations.

However, in terms of the provisions of Section 35(3) of the Land Act, No. 4 of 1999, the Commissioner for Lands is not obliged to take into account existence or none existence of any suit in considering an application for change of land use as Our Client’s application. The Commissioner is only required to consult and take into account the views of:-

- the authority having responsibility for town and country planning in the area where the land is situated. On this, there is a letter Ref. No. NGOR/LD.F.374 of 1st August, 2008 (TCL-6) from the Loliondo Municipal Director addressed to the Commissioner detailing the decision of the Loliondo Counselors in respect of Our Client’s request of change of use of the said Farm No.
373.

- Any other authority whose consent to that change of use is necessary. Regarding this requirement, there is a letter Ref. No. TIC/B.10/17/32 of 11th December, 2008 from the Tanzania Investment Centre addressed to the Commissioner amongst others, expressing a need to expedite Our Client’s application for change of land use in respect of the said Farm No. 373, and the letter Ref No. GD/P. 20/11/37 of 30th April, 2010 from the Ministry of Tourism and Natural Resources granting permission for the land to be used for Tourism Purposes.

It is evident that the consultation process and/or requirement set our under the provisions of Section 35(3) of the Land Act, No. 4 of 1999 is now completed and that the Commissioner is not obliged to consider existence or none existences of any suit when considering an application for change of land use. As such, we implore the Commissioner for Lands to exercise his powers under the provisions of Section 35 (4) of the Land Act No. 4 of 1999 to approve application for change of land use in respect of the said Farm No. 373 and subsequently, endorse on the certificate of title thereof the change of use applied for.

On the ground, the NGOs driving this conflict are deeply involved in carrying out a dangerously escalating and systematic campaign to divide, control, agitate, misinform and incite the community to harass, intimidate and drive out Tanzania Conservation Ltd and Thomson Safaris Ltd from the land in which they hold legal title. Our staff are being violently beaten, bones broken, the wildlife is being poisoned and shot with poison arrows.

In the international media and on the internet, to finance and further their destructive campaign aims, the same NGOs are responsible for an ongoing damaging international media and internet campaign that is bringing about far reaching consequences, substantially damaging Thomson Safaris business, the image and prospects of Loliondo, of Tanzania and the government.

We believe it is crucially important that you thoroughly investigate and bring about a lasting solution to this conflict, particularly with respect to the role that NGO’s are playing in the conflicts in Loliondo.

We cordially invite you to come to the farm to see for yourself the good work that we are doing and the nature of the challenges we face.

Thank you for your kind assistance in the matter

Sincerely,
THE UNITED REPUBLIC OF TANZANIA
TANZANIA INVESTMENT CENTRE

Commissioner for Lands

To Whom It May Concern:

Greetings. We wanted to open up a dialogue with your organization, as we have heard from a journalist and from other sources that you have taken interest in issues concerning the Enashiva Nature Refuge, in the Loliondo region of northern Tanzania.

Tanzania Conservation Limited (TCL) believes that there is a significant amount of misinformation and fabrications that have been circulated about community conservation projects at Enashiva, so we have been proactive in reaching out to several organizations internationally. Listening to, collaborating with, and learning from the communities around Enashiva remains TCL’s top priority. However, we also know that there is a lot to learn from numerous organizations throughout the world and we remain completely open to discussing some of these issues and providing information. In fact, some well-known lecturers in the UK, who focus on responsible tourism, have been very helpful in guiding some discussions with us.

As an introduction, TCL purchased the Sukenya Farm from Tanzania Breweries Limited (TBL) in a legal, transparent bidding process in 2006. The owners quickly saw how the Sukenya Farm could be a model for community empowerment, wildlife conservation, and ecotourism. The directors of TCL met with numerous traditional leaders, village leaders, and other stakeholders to seek guidance on the best way forward.

At the time of sale, there were no Tanzanians living on the farm whatsoever, and accusations about displacement were investigated and found to be untrue by the Arusha Regional Commissioner, Isidore Shirima. Additionally, a 10-month investigation was led by the Office of the Prime Minister and drew the same conclusion. There have been some groups that have been opposed to this sale from the beginning and have led a three-year campaign of spreading misinformation and fabrications about TCL and community conservation initiatives at the Enashiva Nature Refuge. Some of these groups have connections to at least one other foreign tourist company and, we believe, individuals have benefited significantly financially from their campaign.

TCL has vehemently denied these allegations as they have arisen, and it has also conducted its own exhaustive internal investigations. Furthermore, it has regularly sought means to resolve these issues directly with the groups involved using third parities as objective intermediaries. However, these groups have not shown interest in finding such a resolution and have continued to circulate baseless allegations without any primary sources or corroborating concrete evidence.
It should be noted that there are different Maasai clans that live around the Enashiva Nature Refuge — Laitaiyok, Purko, and Loita — in three separate communities and there has been a longstanding tension among these clans over lands in the area. For example, the Sukenya farm had been the ancestral lands of the Laitaiyok clan, whose members continue to dominate the population of Sukenya Village. Sukenya has only been recognized this year as an independent village (as opposed to its previous status of sub-village). This has resulted in jubilation by the village because its people have been marginalized for decades due to clan differences and longstanding tensions.

“Tanzania received its independence in 1961, but we, the people of Sukenya, have not been free since that time,” said the Sukenya sub-village chairman, Loserian Minis. “After almost 50 years now, we finally have our freedom.”

TCL has been falsely accused of not working with communities. We actually have a very strong relationship with Sukenya Village, among other, and have worked extensively with village leaders, elders, women’s groups, and others on various community, conservation, and ecotourism initiatives. TCL has also worked with other communities and all the Maasai clans involved. Members of each of the three clans are represented on TCL’s staff of community wildlife scouts. Furthermore, controlled grazing and water access are issues that are negotiated on a regular basis with communities, as proven by witness testimony, and video testimony of herders who have actually thanked TCL for its assistance in grazing.

The voices of all these supporters have not been heard, and they should be. Instead, they have been drowned out by those who have the resources and political savvy to go to the media and the internet. Specifically, it is a small, vocal group of people who are heavily involved in the nearly 40 NGO’s that exist in Loliondo, one of the most poverty-stricken parts of Tanzania. There are compelling reports of certain NGO’s misleading their supporters, by claiming to have constructed classrooms and homes that in reality do not exist.

We categorically deny the false accusations that have been lodged against us. We enthusiastically welcome the advice and wisdom of legitimate organizations. We also welcome any questions from those who wish to find out more.

As individuals and investors, we have been in Tanzania for 30 years and have an outstanding record of doing philanthropic works throughout the country and working closely with indigenous communities. Please see just a few examples attached. Despite early challenges, we are confident that this matter can be resolved and that the Enashiva Nature Refuge can be an exceptional model for community conservation.

Sincerely,

[hidden text] just posted new information on their website and their Facebook:
I pasted the FB info below and the new info on their website is in the pdf attached.

(picture attached)This is Mbekure. He is 21 years old. He says on 14th February he was with Narikungishu and on other man when they were attacked by Thomson guards. He and his friend Oloimoaja were kicked and punched. He had to be taken to hospital by a local NGO the next day. He says one of Thomson’s drivers, Daniel Olelekurtu, also beat them with a stick.

(picture attached)This is Narikungishu. She is 19 years old. She says that on 14th February she was beaten and assaulted by police and Thomson safari security guards for grazing cattle with two other people near the disputed land. She says the guards tried to push her to her knees and when she refused they beat her with sticks.

From last month:
Happy New Year to all our supporters! For the last month [hidden text] have been putting pressure on the villagers of Sukunya to deny the information published on our [hidden text] website. We can report that the community have consistently and collectively declined to disassociate themselves from the campaign on the basis that everything on the site is true. To read the facts for yourself.
A belated Merry Christmas! And a Happy New Year. I can only hope that peace will come to Enashiva and the communities around the property. However, as you will read in the attached and scrolling below, there is a movement to keep peace away from this area.

I have received this information and am very very concerned. When I was in Loliondo this past month I talked to everyone about how rumors have been spread about our TCL staff injuring local community members and that this would never be tolerated by [REDACTED].

I had mentioned to you and various elders that both of us including [REDACTED] who is the general manager of [REDACTED] and works closely with [REDACTED] need to know if anyone at any time is hurt on our property.

When I was at Mondorossi, [REDACTED] mentioned to me that someone was hurt. I asked him to prove it to me by telling me about the incident and if that person or persons went to the police to report the incident.

Please let me know if this incident did happen. The MRG is funding a campaign to get the land back into the hands of Maanda and her community and we fear that this is just a tactic. For years we have not gone back to disprove her accusations, but I feel we need to do this now.

Please let me if this incident did or did not happen. I believe Lengume has information on this untruth. Or perhaps you will find that it is true. We just want the truth and the proof of the truth.

I hope this finds you well.

This information was recently posted on African Initiatives website (a .pdf with the same information is attached). Be sure to scroll down to read the "case study" about a TCL guard beating 2 young boys - this is the same claim published in AI's latest edition of the Talking Stick but the info below offers more details as well as a photo of the children.

Land Rights in Ngorongoro district, Tanzania
African Initiatives supports the rights of the people of Ngorongoro District for their continued ownership and control over their customary land. This update on the continuing conflict was written by the Pastoral Women’s Council in October 2011.

PWC writes...

Ngorongoro is a remote district in Arusha region situated in North Eastern Tanzania. It has a population of approximately 180,000 people. Ngorongoro District is inhabited primarily by Maasai pastoralists, with the Sonjo agro pastoralists as a minority ethnic group. The district covers an area of 14,036 square km.

The Ngorongoro District has experienced land tenure conflicts between local communities and outsiders for many years. The communities’ access to lands has been restricted through wildlife conservation interests, including establishment of protected areas and hunting concessions.

Suitsambu Farm

Soitsambu village is located in Loliondo Division, Ngorongoro District. The village is a predominantly Maasai pastoralist and agro-pastoralist community of 4,500 people reliant on livestock keeping for human welfare and livelihoods. Land is managed according to seasonal patterns of resource availability, which are largely dependent on rainfall and are governed by rotational grazing reserve systems formalized in village by-laws and land use plans.

In 1984, Tanzania Breweries Ltd (TBL) obtained a parcel of land in Sukenya sub-village of over 10,000 acres in size. This land was obtained in an irregular fashion according to the land law prevailing at the time; for example, the signatories to the village meeting minutes allocating the land were not, in fact, members of the village government or residents of Soitsambu village. However, such practices were widespread in northern Tanzania during this period of ‘land-grabbing’ in the 1980’s.

In 2003, using fabricated village meeting minutes, TBL illegally acquired the title deed to Soitsambu Village, while also increasing their total acreage to 12,617 acres of land. This new title deed gave them control of the land with a 96-year lease agreement.

In 2006, TBL divested the property with sale of their leasehold to Tanzania Conservation Ltd, which has the same ownership as Thomson Safari Company, a US based international tourism company with a major operation in northern Tanzania. Thomson Safari Company began operations with the intention to develop the farm as a tourism site and wildlife conservation area. One of their first objectives was to remove any local people residing in, or seasonally using, the property. This objective has created major conflicts between the company, local government, and the villagers.

Soitsambu villagers have been injured in confrontations with the company and police, and many have been jailed for illegally trespassing onto the farm. The villagers believe that the land is still rightfully theirs and the measures taken to exclude them from the farm are unlawful, unjust and they are damaging the overall welfare of the communities.

Following their obtaining of the lease, Tanzania Conservation Ltd/Thomson Safaris proceeded to evict and restrict the pastoralists of Irmasiling, Mondorosi, Enadooshke, Olepolos and Sukenya sub- villages of Soitsambu to access the land. Accessing this land is particularly important for these people because they have few (and no year-round) water sources available. The Irmasiling Community Dam is a reliable source of water for the pastoralists in this area; however, Thomson has made grazing and watering prohibited because the Ilotimi is only an hour far from Irmasiling and it is located in the disputed land. Instead, during times of drought, Maasai herdsmen must make a 14 hour trip that takes them through Kenya in order to access water.

There is a further catalogue of allegations of police and security guard brutality, which includes: harassment, damage to property, indefinite detentions, and corruption.

Examples of the above include:

- Lisingo ole Nanyoi was shot in the jaw by police with Thomson guards. (detailed further in an article by The Observer [http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2009/sep/06/masai-tribesman-tanzania-tourism])
- Thomson guards have burnt peoples bomas and cattle pens
- Cattle herdsmen have been detained by Loliondo police for “trespassing” on Thomson’s disputed land
- Currently, the community of Mondorosi is refusing an offer of $40,000 to build their school as they do not wish to legitimise Thomson. They’ve been under a lot of pressure from the Division Secretary who has threatened to put people in prison if they don’t accept.
In November 2009, Thomson announced their intention to change the land status from pastoralism to an exclusive tourist concession. In January 2010, the village council of Soitsambu decided to pursue this matter in court, thereby instituting legal proceedings against Tanzania Breweries Ltd (TBL) and Tanzania Conservation Ltd (TCL) at the Arusha High Court.

Preliminary objections against the Sukenya legal case were filed by both TBL and TCL at the end of 2010. On 31st May 2011 the Judge in the case ruled in their favour, dismissing the case on technical grounds. The villager’s legal counsel believes it is not proper to determine a public interest case on such a basis and an appeal has been lodged.

One day before the case was dismissed two young boys herding cattle were beaten by a Thomson Safari guard. This was the first human rights abuse that had occurred since the community had first started legal proceedings. Since the appeal has been lodged there have been no further beatings but the community are still chased off the land for grazing their cattle. They are also denied access to water, which is becoming a critical issue as the area is facing a period of drought.

Case Study: Young boys beaten and injured at Sukenya Farm by TCL guard, 30th May 2011.

On 30th May 2011 the TCL guards found two children grazing cattle near by the Sukenya farm and one of the guard known as Olekomitie Kutess called the boys to come over to him, asking them why they were grazing cattle at the farm. The boys answered that they were not grazing at the farm but we just grazing around the nearby mountain. The guard then cut his stick and beat the boys. The TCL guard was carrying a spear, long knife and two sticks. The guard did not wear the work uniform which they normally dress in and the boys can recognize the guard physically.

Tajewo Nanyoi, aged 11 years old, is a school child who is studying at Mondorosi Primary school in class VI (six). It was around 3:30 PM when this guard found this young boy grazing the cattle near the Sukenya farm and beat him. As a result, the young boy did not attend the school for two days due to the injury he sustained when beaten by the guard. He was injured on the joint of his hand. Tobiko Nanyoi aged 13 years old was also beaten by the TCL guard when he was grazing cattle with Tajewo Nanyoi. This was also with a stick and he was injured on the head. When he was being beaten this young boy tried to ask the guard to forgive them and was told “I will beat you until you vomit”.

Both of these young boys are resident of Irmasiling’ Sub village nearby the dispute land of Sukenya. When the father of the boys asked the guards why they had beaten his children, one guard replied “we will beat them until you stop grazing your cattle at this farm”.

In the centre are the two boys. Tajewo has a Maasai shuka (cloth) around his injured hand as first aid before being taken to hospital.

OBC

In 1992 the Loliondo Game Controlled Area hunting block (which runs along the western edge of the Serengeti National Park) was leased to Ortello Business Corporation (OBC) without any consultation with the communities. A member of an emirate royal family who is a senior officer in the UAE defense ministry leases the area under the Otterlo name, OBC has held exclusive hunting rights to this area ever since. The overlap of the OBC hunting area and these village lands is a major source of ongoing conflict.

In June 2009 20,000 people were evicted from OBC land, their bomas (homes) were burnt and some children went missing during the evictions and are presumed dead.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iqP2MRuJ4Ac&feature=player_embedded http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=i-FP2gRvziw&feature=related

Mainly women and children were affected by the evictions as with the loss of so much land for grazing many men have migrated to cities or coastal resorts in search of employment.

In March 2010 a constitutional court case against the Ministry of Natural Resources and OBC was begun, challenging the creation of the exclusive hunting corridor. It is ongoing with the consolidated efforts of NGOs and the community.
Since the start of the case OBC has allowed grazing on the land and seemed more open to negotiations. It is hoped this might be the beginning of a resolution of the conflict.

Women's response to Sukenya and OBC cases

Over the last few years, in the face of increasing land alienation and human rights abuses, Maasai women in Ngorongoro district have emerged as the leading campaigners against the governments support for foreign investors at the expense of indigenous communities.

In 2008 women and youth demonstrated against TS/TCL at the District Commissioners officer, then took cattle and forced them onto Sukenya farm to graze as a protest. It was during this protest that Lisingo ole Nanyoi was shot in the jaw.

During local government elections in 2009 women campaigned against eight district councillors who were strongly suspected of taking bribes to represent the interests of foreign investors. All eight councillors lost their seats as a result.

In June and July 2009 after the burning of bomas and evictions by OBC, over 500 women demonstrated outside the District commissioners office, demanding to know why the evictions had happened. When no satisfactory answer was received 50 women and 30 men were chosen to travel to Dar to demand answers. They protested in Dar outside the Regional Commissioners office and when again no answers were provided they demonstrated at the Presidents Office.

Women also led families to return to the burnt out land they had been evicted from and lived under trees in order that the land could not be classified as unoccupied by the authorities.

In 2010 over 3,000 women protested against both OBC and TCS/TCL by returning their CCM membership cards at the party District Headquarters (CCM is the political party that has been in government since Independence). Party officials negotiated with the women and eventually promised that if they kept their party membership there would be no more evictions. There have been none since.

NCA

Ngorongoro Conservation Area (NCA), home of the world famous Ngorongoro Crater, is controlled and managed by Ngorongoro Conservation Area Authority (NCAA). It is also a UNESCO World Heritage Site. There are approximately 12,000 Maasai pastoralists living within the area, the majority of whom are women, youth and children. Currently there is growing pressure from the Government to resolve perceived conflicts between local residents and conservation by evicting people to reduce the number of residents in NCA. In 2008 more than 1,500 people were evicted and relocated to near the Kenya-Tanzania border without any land or facilities being provided for them.

NCA law and policies restrict most community activities. For example, livestock are forbidden from grazing in the Ngorongoro Crater and the highlands, the cutting of firewood is restricted and building bomas requires permission. The NCA has also stopped sponsoring the secondary school education of children from the district. In 2009 government restrictions began on subsistence farming and since 2010 it is prohibited, however other livelihoods alternatives have not been provided. The plots are small, under an acre, but are usually cultivated by women to provide essential food for families.

The ban on cultivation is beginning to have a catastrophic affect on residents of NCA. The drought in the area means cattle are without adequate grazing and families are being forced out of the area. The lack of food has necessitated emergency food aid to be brought in but NGO’s have received reports that children are dying of malnutrition every week in the area.

In June this year UNESCO’s World Heritage Committee decided to include considerations for indigenous people and local communities, by encouraging State Parties with World Heritage properties to “involve indigenous peoples and local communities in decision making, monitoring and evaluation of the state of conservation of World Heritage Sites (WHS)” and to “respect the rights of indigenous peoples when nominating, managing and reporting on WHS in indigenous peoples territories”. There are hopes among local NGO’s that this will be the start of some of the authoritarian legislation governing the area and denying people the right to basic livelihoods being revoked.
Land Rights in Ngorongoro district, Tanzania

African Initiatives supports the rights of the people of Ngorongoro District for their continued ownership and control over their customary land. This update on the continuing conflict was written by the Pastoral Women’s Council in October 2011.

PWC writes...
Ngorongoro is a remote district in Arusha region situated in North Eastern Tanzania. It has a population of approximately 180,000 people. Ngorongoro District is inhabited primarily by Maasai pastoralists, with the Sono agro pastoralists as a minority ethnic group. The district covers an area of 14,036 square km.

The Ngorongoro District has experienced land tenure conflicts between local communities and outsiders for many years. The communities’ access to lands has been restricted through wildlife conservation interests, including establishment of protected areas and hunting concessions.

Sukenya Farm
Sukenya village is located in Loliondo Division, Ngorongoro District. The village is a predominantly Maasai pastoralist and agro-pastoralist community of 4,500 people reliant on livestock keeping for human welfare and livelihoods. Land is managed according to seasonal patterns of resource availability, which are largely dependent on rainfall and are governed by rotational grazing reserve systems formalized in village by-laws and land use plans.

In 1984, Tanzania Breweries Ltd (TBL) obtained a parcel of land in Sukenya sub-village of over 10,000 acres in size. This land was obtained in an irregular fashion according to the land law prevailing at the time; for example, the signatories to the village meeting minutes allocating the land were not, in fact, members of the village government or residents of Soitsambu village. However, such practices were widespread in northern Tanzania during this period of ‘land-grabbing’ in the 1980’s.

In 2003, using fabricated village meeting minutes, TBL illegally acquired the title deed to Soitsambu Village, while also increasing their total acreage to 12,617 acres of land. This new title deed gave them control of the land with a 96-year lease agreement.

In 2006, TBL divested the property with sale of their leasehold to Tanzania Conservation Ltd, which has the same ownership as Thomson Safari Company, a US based international tourism company with a major operation in northern Tanzania. Thomson Safari Company began operations with the intention to develop the farm as a tourism site and wildlife conservation area. One of their first objectives was to remove any local people residing in, or seasonally using, the property. This objective has created major conflicts between the company, local government, and the villagers.

Soitsambu villagers have been injured in confrontations with the company and police, and many have been jailed for illegally trespassing onto the farm. The villagers believe that the land is still rightfully theirs and the measures taken to exclude them from the farm are unlawful, unjust and they are damaging the overall welfare of the communities.

Following their obtainment of the lease, Tanzania Conservation Ltd/Thomson Safaris proceeded to evict and restrict the pastoralists of Irmasiling, Mondorosi, Enadooshoke, Olepolos and Sukunya sub-villages of Soitsambu to access the land. Accessing this land is particularly important for these people because they have few (and no year-round) water sources available. The Irmasiling Community Dam is a reliable source of water for the pastoralists in this area; however, Thomson has made grazing and watering prohibited because the Itotimi is only an hour far from Irmasiling and it is located in the disputed land. Instead, during times of drought, Maasai herdsmen must make a 14 hour trip that takes them through Kenya in order to access water.

There is a further catalogue of allegations of police and security guard brutality, which includes: harassment, damage to property, indefinite detentions, and corruption. Examples of the above include:

- Lisingo ole Nanyoi was shot in the jaw by police with Thomson guards. (detailed further in an article by The Observer http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2009/sep/06/maasai-tribesman-tanzania-tourism)
- Thomson guards have burnt peoples bomas and cattle pens
- Cattle herdsmen have been detained by Loliondo police for "trespassing" on Thomson’s disputed land
- Currently, the community of Mondorosi is refusing an offer of $40,000 to build their school as they do not wish to legitimise Thomson. They’ve been under a lot of pressure from the Division Secretary who has threatened to put people in prison if they don’t accept.

In November 2009, Thomson announced their intention to change the land status from pastoralism to an exclusive tourist concession. In January 2010, the village council of Soitsambu decided to pursue this matter in court, thereby instituting legal proceedings against Tanzania Breweries Ltd (TBL) and Tanzania Conservation Ltd (TCL) at the Arusha High Court.

Preliminary objections against the Sukunya legal case were filed by both TBL and TCL at the end of 2010. On 31st May 2011 the Judge in the case ruled in their favour, dismissing the case on technical grounds. The villager’s legal counsel believes it is not proper to determine a public interest case on such a basis and an appeal has been lodged.

One day before the case was dismissed two young boys herding cattle were beaten by a Thomson Safari guard. This was the first human rights abuse that had occurred since the community had first started legal proceedings. Since the appeal has been lodged there have been no further beatings but the community are still chased off the land for grazing their cattle. They are also denied access to water, which is becoming a critical issue as the area is facing a period of drought.

Case Study: Young boys beaten and injured at Sukunya Farm by TCL guard, 30th May 2011.

On 30th May 2011 the TCL guards found the two children grazing cattle near by the Sukunya farm and one of the guard known as Olekomite Kutess called the boys to come over to him, asking them why they were grazing cattle at the farm. The boys answered that they were not grazing at the farm but we just grazing around the nearby mountain. The guard then cut his stick and beat the boys. The TCL guard was carrying a spear, long knife and two sticks. The guard did not wear the work uniform which they normally dress in and the boys can recognize the guard physically.

Tajewo Nanyoi, aged 11 years old, is a school child who is studying at Mondorosi Primary school in class VI (six). It was around 3:30 PM when this guard found this young boy grazing the cattle near the Sukunya farm and beat him. As a result, the young boy did not attend the school for two days due to the injury he sustained when beaten by the guard. He was injured on the joint of his hand. Tobiko Nanyoi aged 13 years old is was also beaten by the TCL guard when he was grazing cattle with Tajewo Nanyoi. This was also with a stick and he was injured on the head. When he was being beaten this young boy tried to ask the guard to forgive them and was told “I will beat you until you vomit”.

Both of these young boys are resident of Irmasling' Sub village nearby the dispute land of Sukunya. When the father of the boys asked the guards why they had beaten his children, one guard replied “we will beat them until you stop grazing your cattle at this farm”.

In the centre are the two boys. Tajewo has a Maasai shuka (cloth) around his injured hand as first aid before being taken to hospital.

OBC
In 1992 the Loliondo Game Controlled Area hunting block (which runs along the western edge of the Serengeti National Park) was leased to Ortello Business Corporation (OBC) without any consultation with the communities. A member of an emirate royal family who is a senior officer in the UAE defense ministry leases the area under the Otterlo name. OBC has held exclusive hunting rights to this area ever since. The overlap of the OBC hunting area and these village lands is a major source of ongoing conflict.

In June 2009 20,000 people were evicted from OBC land, their bomas (homes) were burnt and some children went missing during the evictions and are presumed dead.

Hi,

We have received a lot of information from Jeremy and feel that there is a very strong attempt at hand by Maanda to undermine us at the moment.

What concerns me at the moment is that that attached article states that we have hurt two young people. This is what gets people riled up. At the Mondorossi meeting I told the village elders that we would not support any violence on our property...from outsiders coming in or from our staff. I looked at [redacted] and [redacted] and reminded them that any of our staff would lose their jobs if they did anything violent except to protect themselves.

I asked Daniel Ngoitiko for details of an incident he wanted me to know about...but I never heard from him. Then I see this article. I have just written to [redacted] asking him to let us know if anything happens on our property and to report it to us. And I asked him if this article was true or not.

So, it seems that we need the DC to tell us also if this happened or not.

[redacted] or [redacted] can you follow up? I know this will get blown out of proportion if left undone.

Thanks,

Accessing this land is particularly important for these people because they have few (and no year-round) water sources available. The Ilmasiling Community Dam is a reliable source of water for the pastoralists in this area; however, Thomson has made grazing and watering prohibited because the Iloitimi is only an hour far from Ilmasiling and it is located in the disputed land. Instead, during times of drought, Maasai herdsmen must make a 14 hour trip that takes them through Kenya in order to access water.

There is a further catalogue of allegations of police and security guard brutality, which includes: harassment, damage to property, indefinite detentions, and corruption. Examples of the above include:

- Lisingo ole Nanyoi was shot in the jaw by police with Thomson guards. (detailed further in an article by The Observer http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2009/sep/06/masai-tribesman-tanzania-tourism)
- Thomson guards have burnt peoples homas and cattle pens
- Cattle herders have been detained by Loliondo police for "trespassing" on Thomson's disputed land
- Currently, the community of Mondorosi is refusing an offer of $40,000 to build their school as they do not wish to legitimise Thomson. They've been under a lot of pressure from the Division Secretary who has threatened to put people in prison if they don't accept.

In November 2009, Thomson announced their intention to change the land status from pastoralism to an exclusive tourist concession. In January 2010, the village council of Soitsambu decided to pursue this matter in court, thereby instituting legal proceedings against Tanzania Breweries Ltd (TBL) and Tanzania Conservation Ltd (TCL) at the Arusha High Court.

Preliminary objections against the Sukukenya legal case were filed by both TBL and TCL at the end of 2010. On 31st May 2011 the Judge in the case ruled in their favour, dismissing the case on technical grounds. The villager’s legal counsel believes it is not proper to determine a public interest case on such a basis and an appeal has been lodged.

One day before the case was dismissed two young boys herding cattle were beaten by a Thomson Safari guard. This was the first human rights abuse that had occurred since the community had first started legal proceedings. Since the appeal has been lodged there have been no further beatings but the community are still chased off the land for grazing their cattle. They are also denied access to water, which is becoming a critical issue as the area is facing a period of drought.

Case Study: Young boys beaten and injured at Sukenya Farm by TCL guard, 30th May 2011.

On 30th May 2011 the TCL guards found the two children grazing cattle near by the Sukanya farm and one of the guard known as Olekamite Kutesa called the boys to come over to him, asking them why they were grazing cattle at the farm. The boys answered that they were not grazing at the farm but we just grazing around the nearby mountain. The guard then cut his stick and beat the boys. The TCL guard was carrying a spear, long knife and two sticks. The guard did not wear the work uniform which they normally dress in and the boys can recognize the guard physically.

Tajewo Nanyoi, aged 11 years old, is a school child who is studying at Mendorsi Primary school in class VI (six). It was around 3:30 PM when this guard found this young boy grazing the cattle near the Sukanya farm and beat him. As a result, the young boy did not attend the school for two days due to the injury he sustained when beaten by the guard. He was injured on the joint of his hand. Tobiko Nanyoi age 13 years old is was also beaten by the TCL guard when he was grazing cattle with Tajewo Nanyoi. This was also with a stick and he was injured on the head. When he was being beaten this young boy tried to ask the guard to forgive them and was told “I will beat you until you vomit”.

Both of these young boys are resident of Ikmasiling’ Sub village nearby the dispute land of Sukanya. When the father of the boys asked the guards why they had beaten his children, one guard replied “we will beat them until you stop grazing your cattle at this farm”.

being taken to hospital.

OBC
In 1992 the Loliondo
Game Controlled Area hunting block (which runs along the western edge of the Serengeti National Park) was leased to Ortello Business Corporation (OBC) without any consultation with the communities.
A member of an emirate royal family who is a senior officer in the UAE defense ministry leases the area under the Otterlo name. OBC has held exclusive hunting rights to this area ever since. The overlap of the OBC hunting area and these village lands is a major source of ongoing conflict.

In June 2009 20,000 people were evicted from OBC land, their bomas (homes) were burnt and some children went missing during the evictions and are presumed dead.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qZ2MruJ4Ac&feature=player_embedded http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=i-FF2gRvziw&feature=related

Mainly women and children were affected by the evictions as with the loss of so much land for grazing many men have migrated to cities or coastal resorts in search of employment.

In March 2010 a constitutional court case against the Ministry of Natural Resources and OBC was begun, challenging the creation of the exclusive hunting corridor. It is ongoing with the consolidated efforts of NGOs and the community.

Since the start of the case OBC has allowed grazing on the land and seemed more open to negotiations. It is hoped this might be the beginning of a resolution of the conflict.

Women’s response to Sukenya and OBC cases
Over the last few years, in the face of increasing land alienation and human rights abuses, Maasai women in Ngorongoro district have emerged as the leading campaigners against the governments support for foreign investors at the expense of indigenous communities.

In 2008 women and youth demonstrated against TS/TCL at the District Commissioners officer, then took cattle and forced them onto Sukenya farm to graze as a protest. It was during this protest that Lisingo ole Nanyoi was shot in the jaw.

During local government elections in 2009 women campaigned against eight district councillors who were strongly suspected of taking bribes to represent the interests of foreign investors. All eight councillors lost their seats as a result.

In June and July 2009 after the burning of bomas and evictions by OBC, over 500 women demonstrated outside the District commissioners office, demanding to know why the evictions had happened. When no satisfactory answer was received 50 women and 30 men were chosen to travel to Dar to demand answers. They protested in Dar outside the Regional Commissioners office and when again no answers were provided they demonstrated at the Presidents Office.

Women also led families to return to the burnt out land they had been evicted from and lived under trees in order that the land could not be classified as unoccupied by the authorities.

In 2010 over 3,000 women protested against both OBC and TCS/TCL by returning their CCM membership cards at the party
District Headquarters (CCM is the political party that has been in government since Independence). Party officials negotiated with the women and eventually promised that if they kept their party membership there would be no more evictions. There have been none since.

NCA
Ngorongoro Conservation Area (NCA), home of the world famous Ngorongoro Crater, is controlled and managed by Ngorongoro Conservation Area Authority (NCAA). It is also a UNESCO World Heritage Site. There are approximately 12,000 Maasai pastoralists living within the area, the majority of whom are women, youth and children. Currently there is growing pressure from the Government to resolve perceived conflicts between local residents and conservation by evicting people to reduce the number of residents in NCA. In 2008 more than 1,500 people were evicted and relocated to near the Kenya-Tanzania border without any land or facilities being provided for them.

NCA law and policies restrict most community activities. For example, livestock are forbidden from grazing in the Ngorongoro Crater and the highlands, the cutting of firewood is restricted and building bomas requires permission. The NCA has also stopped sponsoring the secondary school education of children from the district. In 2009 government restrictions began on subsistence farming and since 2010 it is prohibited, however other livelihoods alternatives have not been provided. The plots are small, under an acre, but are usually cultivated by women to provide essential food for families.

The ban on cultivation is beginning to have a catastrophic affect on residents of NCA. The drought in the area means cattle are without adequate grazing and families are being forced out of the area. The lack of food has necessitated emergency food aid to be brought in but NGO’s have received reports that children are dying of malnutrition every week in the area.

In June this year UNESCO’s World Heritage Committee decided to include considerations for indigenous people and local communities, by encouraging State Parties with World Heritage properties to “involve indigenous peoples and local communities in decision making, monitoring and evaluation of the state of conservation of World Heritage Sites (WHS)” and to “respect the rights of indigenous peoples when nominating, managing and reporting on WHS in indigenous peoples territories”. There are hopes among local NGO’s that this will be the start of some of the authoritarian legislation governing the area and denying people the right to basic livelihoods being revoked.

To Whom It May Concern:

Subject: Change of Land Use over Farm 373 Sukenya, Soitsambu Village, Ngorongoro District.

Kindly refer to the above named subject.

We are writing to request that Farm 373 that we purchased from Tanzania Breweries in 2006 for tourism purposes be given permission to allow tourists to visit as part of a 13 day safari itinerary.

The Tanzania Investment Centre has already approved and registered our tourism project and we were granted a Certificate of Incentives number 03073 dated 4th September 2006. In order to begin the proposed activities which the TIC certificate shows as “To promote eco-tourism and conservation in Ngorongoro” a change of Land Use is required. TIC have approved this change.

The appropriate committees of Ngorongoro District Council have also approved the land use change back in January 2008. They are pleased to see tourism come to the area. See attached letter.

We have an agreement with tour operator [Redacted] of Arusha. [Redacted] is promoting and selling two week safaris that will include three days of eco-tourism visits to the farm where they will be carrying out wildlife viewing from vehicles and on foot based from their camp they plan to install on the farm. These marketing plans have been progressing well since March 2008 and the first tourist groups will arrive in June 2009. Given the world wide recession and serious drop in tourists to Tanzania this coming season, we want to be sure our plans will succeed.

We have worked hard for the past two years preparing our project for tourism.

We would like to introduce [Redacted] He is visiting you to discuss our situation and to seek your kind attention and help. We are asking for the land use change to be expedited or at the very least to obtain written permission that will give us a basis to proceed and accept tourists at our Sukenya Farm 373, Loliondo District beginning this June, 2009.

Purchasing the land from Tanzania Breweries Ltd and preparing the land for tourism use has been a large foreign investment in Tanzania. In addition [Redacted] has also invested heavily in marketing and selling safaris to Tanzania. [Redacted] has also committed to install a camp and equipment, vehicles and staff for the project. Back in 2006, the date of June, 2009 seemed very far in the future, however this date is now fast approaching and we urgently seek a resolution so that we can move forward and accept the expected safari guests and continue to build Tanzania tourism.

Yours faithfully,

Tanzania: Maasai land dispute with safari tourism group

_Freddy Batundi, MRG’s Capacity Building Officer in Africa, reports back on a visit to Maasai communities in northern Tanzania._

Towards the end of last year I made a field trip to Loliondo, Tanzania, as part of MRG’s work to support Maasai community meetings in the sub-villages of Sukenya, Mondorosi and Enadooshoke, which are part of Soitsambu village in northern Tanzania, to agree on their position for possible negotiations with Thomson Safaris over a disputed stretch of land known as Sukenya Farm.

Thomson Safaris is a US-based tourism operator that works closely with Thomson Safaris Ltd in Arusha, Tanzania. Both companies, being under the same ownership, are also under the same umbrella of quality control. Thomson Safaris proudly boasts that it has been operating in Tanzania for over 30 years, and it is among the top companies offering deluxe safari tourism services in the country.

The primary cause of the conflict between the local community and Thomson Safaris is over the land ownership of Sukenya Farm. The main struggle of the Soitsambu people has been to gain back the ownership of Sukenya farm, located in Soitsambu Village, Ngorongoro District, Arusha Region, northern Tanzania. The land in dispute lies between the sub-villages of Sukenya, Mondorosi and Enadooshoke (which incorporates a sub-sub-village, Irmasiling), and is also bordering Enguserosambu village. All three sub-villages are currently in Soitsambu Village within Soitsambu Ward in Loliondo Division. Sukenya sub-village alone is inhabited by 500 people. Soitsambu village has a population of 7000 residents.

The dispute dates back to 1985 when Tanzanian Breweries Ltd (TBL), a para-statal company, laid claim to 10,000 acres of land within the borders of Soitsambu village for the purposes of wheat and barley cultivation. In fact the company used only a minimal amount of the land for such cultivation (700 acres) and, to all extents and purposes, life continued as before for the local Maasai who used the land for grazing and watering their livestock.

However, a small number of the villagers did seek to challenge the grant of land to TBL in the courts. They lost their case, not least because the village chairman and secretary appeared as witnesses on behalf of TBL saying that they had consented to the handing over of the land on behalf of the community.

An appeal was struck out because of a technical issue over the non-filing of the correct papers. Following those legal proceedings, TBL had their title to the land formally registered in 2003 with the issuance of a certificate of occupancy for 99 years, which, in fact, provided for use of 12,617 acres, i.e. an additional 2,617 acres. Not long afterwards, TBL leased the land on a 96 year lease to Tanzanian Conservation Ltd (TCL) – a Tanzanian incorporated company but which is effectively run by an American couple who run Thomson Safaris (www.thomsonsafaris.com).
This is when the real problems began to occur for the community, as they were being denied access to the land because Thomson Safaris sought to establish it for the use of safari tourism. There are accounts of beatings and shootings taking place, of arrests as the local police work hand in hand with Thomson Safaris security staff, etc. Matters reached such a point that a presidential commission was set up to investigate the situation, but its report has never been made public. Further court proceedings were initiated in February 2010 by Soitsambu village against both TBL and TCL. The new case was initially dismissed in May 2011 on the basis that it was essentially an attempt to re-open the earlier proceedings. However, an appeal against the May 2011 was recently successful before the Court of Appeal and the case is to be returned to the lower court to be heard in full.

Back to my visit.
The community meetings were organised by the Pastoralist Women Council (PWC) with the support of MRG, through its legal cases programme. MRG’s role was to support the community in deciding what kind of a settlement they want, help them build consensus, and appreciate the consequences or likely outcomes of their options.

From Mondorosi, Enadooshoke and Sukunya sub-villages a total of 337 men and 226 women participated. Key community leaders were present including the chairperson of Soitsambu village, Mr. Boniface, William Alais, the village councillor of the Oloipiri area, Daniel Ngoitiko, a village councillor of the Kanjwel area, and Elias Melami, the health and development officer in the Ngorongoro district.

The district commissioner from Loliondo came in person to speak to people and encouraged community members to ‘embrace wholeheartedly the way of peaceful negotiation as all of us are tired of this struggle which in fact is only impoverishing our people.’ An elder from Mondorosi said: ‘This is the beginning of the end. By God’s help we want a peaceful end to this.’

In Tanzania, the law provides avenues for villages to engage in direct negotiation with companies conducting business on community land. The Local Government Act of 1982 makes villages corporate entities and empowers them to engage in activities that improve the welfare of the community. The Village Land Act of 1999 gives power to the Village Council and Village Assembly to manage and administer the village land for the benefit of the community.

It is on this legal basis that villages within Tanzania have entered into agreements with tourism companies to share the proceeds. This gives them direct economic benefits from land and natural resources that are available in their villages. Based on the above, community members from the three sub-villages affected by the Sukunya Farm dispute agreed that their position in any negotiations with Thomson Safaris were:

- The village members recognize that Thomson Safaris has done investments on some part of the land. The village members agreed that Thomson Safaris could retain exclusive land ownership on 2000 acres around the MOROGWA area.
- The community members are to acquire back the ownership of 10,617 acres of the land and then enter into direct agreement with Thomson Safaris to allow Thomson Safaris to continue to use some of the land for tourism activities.
- The process leading to the agreement between the community and the company should be participatory, transparent and stipulate the following:
  1. Recognition of community rights ownership over the 10,617 acres of the land.
  2. Unrestricted access to water points, foot ways from one sub village to the other, and specified grazing areas for the community.
  3. Clear rules and procedures for implementation and management of the contract should be put in place.
  4. Clarified roles and responsibilities for both parties in terms of security and other relationship resolutions. Items like the length of the contract, the annual land renting fees, the bed fee per nights per person (for tourist entering the community land) and the termination of the contract should be clearly be discussed in the contract.
  5. The village council will oversee the use of the income generated by the contract for equitable sharing among the three sub villages for their socio-economic development.
The people believe that if the above issues are taken into consideration in any negotiations, it will result in peaceful co-existence. A man from Enadooshoke sub-village said: 'What we need is real investment that empowers us because we also have to survive.'

The meetings with the members of the various sub-villages were important in their own right in bringing the villagers to a common position and increasing their sense of ownership of the legal proceedings. Unfortunately, approaches to Thomson Safaris to enter into negotiations have subsequently been met with a resounding 'no' as well as completely unfounded and unsustained allegations of fraud and false representation.
Masael community meeting in Sukunya Village
Happy said you wanted this letter, which was in my files.
Dar-es-Salaam, The United Republic of Tanzania

September 10, 2008

Greetings, sir. It is our most sincere hope that you are doing well and that you are continuing to progress in your esteemed labours of serving this great nation, the United Republic of Tanzania.

It has come to our attention that the [redacted] has authorized the formation of an official committee to investigate the sale of the former Sukeyna farm (Loliondo, District of Ngorongoro, Arusha Region) from the part-government-owned Tanzania Breweries Limited (TBL) to the owners of [redacted].

First off and foremost, I would like to both personally and officially, on behalf of [redacted], thank you, [redacted] for taking the courageous initiative to help form this independent investigation. I am the [redacted] for the use of this land. My name is [redacted]. I am a Maasai man and I have been leading a team of ten men to prepare this land for potential community-based tourism usage and for nature and wildlife conservation. The men are from local communities around the farm. They represent all of the three Maasai clans of Loliondo — the Laitaiyok, the Loita, and the Purko. Even the minority tribe of the region, the Sonjo, is also represented in our workforce. We believe this to be a note of importance because one of priorities is to assist local communities find employment. In whatever small way possible, we will always attempt to include all local clans and tribes in our activities or, if possible, those activities of the local non-government organisations that we support.

Furthermore, on behalf of [redacted], we pledge our highest support for this committee, and we will do anything in our power to transparently and actively cooperate with the investigation. We will answer any questions asked of us. We will provide any necessary documents or evidence. We will be at the committee’s disposal.

[redacted] which has operated and invested in tourism and people for nearly 30 years in Tanzania, wants to see the truth come out about this issue just as the citizens of Tanzania want to read the truth. Unfortunately, there have been a few Tanzanian newspaper stories that have failed to reveal the truth, and, in fact, have subverted the truth by spreading hearsay, rumors, and, at times, intentional and malicious untruths. We are overjoyed to know that individuals form such esteemed ministries as Tourism and Natural Resources, Land, and Home Affairs will be selected to be a part of this investigative body, so that they will reach their own firm and final conclusions. Once again, we pledge our support for this investigation.

If we may be allowed to give our own perspective on the issue, however, we will give an abridged version of the early course of events. We know that we stand on firm ground.

In 2006, the [redacted] made a legal and transparent transaction for the former TBL Sukeyna farm in Loliondo. In 2006, the sale of the farm was, of course, advertised and publicized in both government-owned and independent publications, such as the Daily News and the Arusha Times. Please note that, according to the information we received from TBL, the bidding process went through several stages, in which at least one initial bidder won the bidding process, however, proved unable to meet the legal and financial requirements by the allotted date. Eventually, the [redacted] won a later round of the open bidding process.

The [Redacted] and [Redacted] have been investing in Tanzania with the Tanzania Investment Centre (TIC) as a mutual partner and friend for nearly 30 years. They have seen tourism grow in this country to become one of the top income earners and sectors in this great nation. For tourism goes hand with sustainable economic and social development and cultural and environmental conservation. Once fully engaged in tourism activities, the former TBL land will be a part of that tradition and balance. We will do everything in its power to increase more opportunities for local employment, development, and cooperation among investors and communities.

[Redacted] and our supporters efforts have already begun to support local communities and efforts, including the donation of a maize grinding machine to a Maasai women’s group, the development of a bore hole and water well near the Sukenya sub-village and Soit Sambu village, financial support for a local primary school, and further exploration of opportunities to support local education and communities through various efforts.

[Redacted] had the auspicious opportunity to meet with the esteemed [Redacted] last year during his visit to New York City and the official launch of the impressive new advertising campaign to trumpet Tanzania’s many tourism wonders for travelers and investors around the world. We have been proud to receive the Tourism Operator Year and Humanitarian of the Year awards from the Tanzanian Tourism Board (TTB). We look forward to the “Tanzania Festive Evening” to be held in New York this year in honor of [Redacted], and to announce the second phase the Tanzanian tourism advertising campaign, as we were recently warmly welcomed by the Minister for Natural Resources and Tourism, Shamsa Selenga Mwangungu. On the same day, in fact, we will also be honored as a finalist in the World Savers Awards, which was published in the prestigious travel publication, Conde Nast Traveler and which honors travel operators and businesses around the world for community-based tourism, conservation, and other efforts.

[Redacted] again, we thank you for your bold and candid initiatives concerning this matter and we look forward to communicating further with the investigative body, once it is formed, as necessary. Asante sana.

Sincerely,
Hello Tom,
Thank you for allowing me to cc your various directors and Chairman of the Board. I continue to read about CPJ (Sunday New York Times) and appreciate your intensive coverage of journalist issues. I can also imagine how difficult it is for you to get to the real truth about issues at hand when you are collecting information from various sources and in particular other international press articles.

I would like your directors and board members to know that there is something extraordinarily odd about why Thomson Safaris has been demonized by one group of Maasai in Loliondo. You have not called to ask me more poignant questions about why is even a part of the puzzle. Perhaps if I provide more information, you look in a very different place to get some answers about the death of Trent. I can promise you and tell you with all honesty that we have had nothing to do with Trent in any way. He may have been researching some issues that were reported to him by various sources but we did not know that or know him.

Let me explain some important points:

1. Purchased a titled deed for 12,000 acres of land in the Loliondo area from the Tanzania Breweries that was advertised in the newspaper. TBL had owned this land since 1986 and we were sold a clean and clear title to the land. The entire bidding process was transparent. We, by the way, did not win the first bid but the first bidder did not pay in their allotted 30 days so it went out to bid again. The second time we won. We did not know much about the land except that it would fulfill a dream of ours where we could find a parcel of land that would provide wildlife refuge, then bring tourists to the area, and use the tourist dollars for benefits to the local community. We wanted to provide a model of community based tourism that very few were practicing. All other tour operators were taking tourists closer to the Serengeti where communities were reaping some benefits. With Enashiva Refuge (the name we gave to the 12,000 acres) located 1.5 hours from the Serengeti, our local neighbors were getting no benefits. We felt our presence could benefit our neighbors.

2. Tanzania’s Millennium Goals include some key points that we wanted to embrace: Primary education for all and the empowerment of women. With education and empowered women we felt that the HIV/AIDS issues, health issues, clean water, lower infant mortality all would get addressed. Layer that on top of the extraordinary loss of wildlife on our planet, we felt that we had a symbiotic answer to how to get tourist dollars to protect wildlife and provide sustainable development to our neighbors.

3. My first visit to Enashiva was to meet with the local elders with a Maasai schooled as a vet with experience in community based tourism. The elders suggested that we help with the local school, provide a bore hole, and if possible a maize mill for the Enyawata Women’s Group. They supported our plan and we were pleased to hear about their needs. But, at the same time, we were alerted to a small group of Maasai who were not pleased that this land that was bought by This was the first time we heard this. I wanted to meet with one of the leaders of this group of Maasai so headed to the household of a woman who I thought would benefit greatly because of her influence within the community and her dedication to pastoral women’s rights. Since many of our guests come on our “Women to Women” trips, I thought that this would be a great start to our community based tourism model. My intention was to find a way to work with this important woman. She was in Kenya at the time, so we met with her husband and talked about future plans. I sent her a letter introducing myself and asking if she would like to join in our efforts to build a community based tourism model. Her response made it clear that she was very very angry because she believed we did not own the land. We continue to suggest that she inquires about this out at the government level not with us.

From that point on the number of cattle on the property increased by 10 fold. The community elders were very unhappy that somehow the number of cows had increased .since this was not the plan that they had agreed on.
8 members from the community (who are falsely reported by various sources to be anything from guards, to security men, security guards, security officers) continued to ask the cattle owners to leave the property. The Maasai who help us are members of the various communities around us, from all the various tribes, and are there for anti-poaching. When these men were threatened by poisonous arrows, they called the police to get help because they feared for their lives. Trent was not there, I was not there, or Brian McCormiac. What we all have been told is from the point of view of various Maasai who have a stake in gathering momentum to get this land, although it rightfully belongs (through a titled deed) to me and me. It has been reported that a young Maasai was wounded by the police during this altercation. However, it has also been reported that he was injured across the border in Kenya. Hours earlier then he was supposedly shot in Tanzania and his signature appears in the logbook of a clinic who was not able to accept him because in Kenya and Tanzania there is a civil dispute you have to go to the police and get a report before you can be accepted at a clinic. Note from the Arusha Times: Ole Nanyoi whose jaws were shattered by a bullet was first carried by his fellow villagers to Osimer hospital on the Kenyan side of the border at Loliondo as soon as he got shot. Perhaps this would be a good starting place for your investigation, Perhaps Nanyoi was shot in Kenya. Nanyoi’s father is one of the local community members helping to make Enashiva into a community based tourism model. Why would Nanyoi’s father join in our efforts to begin community based tourism if he believed that his son was hurt by our anti-poaching patrol. Nothing rings right in anything that has been printed.

4. Fast forward to your call. Who was Trent Keegan? We did not know who Trent Keegan was. When Jeremy hung up the phone and told us that Trent had been murdered in Kenya we were very confused and saddened that a journalist had died in Kenya. A young Kiwi was murdered in Kenya? What happened and why is CPJ asking us about Trent? In asking Daniel that day, he told us that he did not know a Trent Keegan. Daniel did find out that the young man wearing a shuka who was seen walking to a nearby boma was Trent Keegan. Our anti-poaching patrol asked him where he was going, he said to “Mama Maanda’s”. So you asked me:

--Prior to Keegan’s death, he wrote emails to professional contacts in which he said he was questioned two times by security guards and local police regarding a piece he was researching concerning alleged land disputes involving the Maasai and .

The reason I asked to see the emails is that I know that if you get these emails you will not see mentioned, because we did NOT question Trent Keegan about a piece he was researching concerning and disputes between Maasai and . You are writing as though you believe these emails exist because some press coverage says he was questioned two times by people. Please find them and show them to us. I can guarantee you that employees saw Trent walking across Enashiva Nature Refuge and asked him where he was going. They did now who he was. Never did question Trent about some article he was writing.

We have never been contacted by any official from New Zealand, the U.S., Kenya, or Tanzania about the death of Trent. We would be very willing to be a part of any investigation.

Trent Keegan was given false information. Let me give you an example.

Brian McCormiac, the author of African Farmers Journal, personally handed to me a letter from himself as well as a 7 page document that he says is “an exact copy of the disk Trent made as backup and left with me for safe-keeping when police arrived with the local manager at Emanyata Secondary School (15th May 2008) to demand to see our passports and work permits.” I have this letter and document in front of me now. He handed this to me when I met him at the Wasso Hostel. Two things, the headmaster of the Emanyata Secondary School was introduced to me by Brian at the Wasso Hostel as the man who met the police and . With Brian beside me, I asked this headmaster if he knew and he said, “No.” It was not who accompanied the police to the school. Second, Brian handed me this document which I quoted in letters to the government asking for their advice and help. Brian has suggested in his African Farmers Journal and in press releases asking how did I get this document when it is on Trent’s computer. Well, Brian printed much info in this blog and he gave it to me along with his letter and I have it here in front of me and am happy to share it with you.

Why is Brian doing this? Why are journalists being handed incorrect information? We understand that there are Maasai who want to protect their grazing lands, we respect their needs. But to place innocent people and a company that has dedicated 30 years to bringing guests to Tanzania in the center of the death of a respected young journalist is sad.
Why not contact the District Commissioner? Or the Regional Commissioner. Both have made very clear statements about all the questions you have asked. The Regional Commissioner gave a press release to 30 journalists in Arusha, Tanzania and made very clear statements. Would you like a transcript?

I honestly respect your investigation, but this is feeling like a witch-hunt and I am innocent of anything and everything that has been charged by a group of angry Maasai. We are a peace loving, Tanzania loving company. We are two people who have dedicated our lives to Tanzania and her people. Note that I am the co-founder of Friends of Tanzanian Schools. We spent all of our savings to purchase this piece of land so that we could begin this model. We would never hurt anyone, ever.

I do not understand why you and this small group of Maasai continue to try to place us at the center of a murder. A few of our competitors have joined in this witch-hunt, but everyone else who knows knows that these stories could not possibly be true.

We have confirmed information in these stories independently.

For reference, below are links to two news stories that describe e-mails that Keegan sent to professional contacts. You may be familiar with these stories; they include comments from Thomson:

Regarding the alleged incident involving Lesingo Nanyoi, we've attached a pdf of a Sunday World story (which also references the e-mail assertions) and a link to another news article.

Hi Tom,

Who is your editor? Not sure I know since I thought you were the editor for the African section. I’d like to cc my correspondence to your editor as well as some members of your board. I have great respect for CPJ and want to make sure they understand my support.

Could you please send me copies of the emails from Trent because I have no idea what you are asking here.

Have you interviewed Nanyo? I think he knows more than anyone.

Get back to me when you can.

Hi [Redacted]...

Sorry to keep bugging you with questions. My editor had some follow up questions so I was hoping you could get back to me when time permits. And many thanks for your replies to my earlier questions.
--Prior to Keegan’s death, he wrote emails to professional contacts in which he said he was questioned two times by Thomson Safari security guards and local police regarding a piece he was researching concerning alleged land disputes involving the Maasai and

--Can you confirm that security guards interviewed Keegan on two occasions in April and/or May 2008? Can you shed any light on why security guards wanted to interview Keegan? What did you learn from those interviews?

--Colleagues and friends of Keegan have questioned whether Kenyan police sufficiently looked into Keegan’s activities in Tanzania. Can you tell us whether Kenyan police, or any other police agency, contacted or its representatives about Keegan’s death? If so, can you tell us what representatives told police?

--In his emails to professional contacts, Keegan alleges that Maasai herdsman were assaulted by security guards or police acting on behalf of the company. Can you comment on that allegation?

--In particular, he cites the case of Lesingo Nanyoi, who was allegedly shot by police during an altercation in spring 2008 that allegedly involved guards and young Maasai. Can you comment on that allegation?

--Sorry for all of this, I hope all is well in (?). I have family in Amherst, MA btw…

Dear Tom,
I am out the remainder of today and would like to talk when I am in next Wednesday. Will that work for you?

Could you please restate #3. What you are asking here, are you asking,

"Some of the reports (on the web) I have seen are a bit murky - in fact I am convinced that these purported abuses against the locals were carried out by the police - and the as reported. Would you agree? Do the police and Safari guards work closely together?"

Is this the vain of your question?...or is the double negative meant to say something different. Clarity will certainly help.

Thanks Tom,

Dear
Many thanks for agreeing to an interview and congratulations on winning the Natl. Geographic award for the second year in a row! Below are some basic questions I would like to ask. But first off, let me explain a little about the report. At the Committee to Protect Journalists we are exploring a rather worrisome trend: the increasing numbers of killed and imprisoned journalists around the world. I am looking into a string of deaths across Eastern Africa, including that of Trent Keegan (who was killed in Nairobi last May). Just days before arriving in Nairobi, however, he was investigating a story in Loliondo regarding a land dispute between some of the local populace and your company. I thought it would be helpful to get some background on what Trent was working on and your perspective / insight would be a great help.

Here are some questions:

1. Were you familiar with Trent’s case? If so, when and how did you find out about it?
2. In May 2008 Trent was interviewing some Maasai people who have several complaints such as: lacking access to water supplies, illegal arrests and bribes etc. – are these complaints legitimate? What steps have you taken to resolve the disputes?
3. Some of the reports (on the web) I have seen are a bit murky – in fact I am not convinced that these purported abuses against the locals were not carried out by the police – and not the [redacted] guards as reported. Would you agree? Do the police and Safari guards work closely together?
4. How is [redacted] relationship with the local press – have there been other reports similar to what Trent was working on?
5. I stumbled upon a blog called “Africa Farmer’s journal” where the author claims he was intimidated – nearly arrested by some of your staff after being invited to attend a reconciliation meeting you had organized. I got the impression from the blog that the intimidation was not coming from the international staff but from some of the locals affiliated with the safari company. Can you tell me more about this incident? Is there a grain of truth to it?
6. Does [redacted] have a board? Is it public?

These are all I can think of at the moment. Is there a chance we could chat sometime tomorrow? Many thanks for agreeing to an interview and I hope to speak to you soon.

Dear [Name],

This is Tom Rhodes from the Committee to Protect Journalists - I believe we were in touch briefly last year during the time a New Zealand photo-journalist, Trent Keegan, had died in Nairobi in May 2008. We are working on a report concerning killed journalists in Kenya (Trent was killed in Nairobi although he had been previously researching a story in Loliondo) and Trent will be included in the report. I was hoping we could arrange a time to have an interview (either in person or via telephone) at some point in the near future. Please let me know if there is an ideal time to conduct this.

Dear Madame/Gentlemen:

This letter concerns a documentary filmmaker, Rob Harley, whose film, Who Killed Trent Keegan?, is being funded by TV One.

It pains me, for several reasons to write this letter. First, because I do not like to play any part in stopping the free exchange of ideas and secondly because there are substantial and conflicting human rights issues. I have written books urging the freest of speech, arguing for the greatest protection for human rights and taught both subjects in many American (including Yale and Columbia) and foreign law schools, even for three years in China. I have traveled on many occasions to Africa and been an international defender of human rights on that continent.

I have never written a letter like this before.
Jane Wrightson, Jeff Latch and Jude Callen
November 5, 2010

I have not seen the film because it is not finished, but I believe I know exactly where it is going.

I am nearly always on the side of permitting speech. In this instance, the film being funded is so distorting of the truth and so unfair to my friends and clients that I am against its distribution. Secondly it so mangles the facts as to do a disservice to the Maasai.

Mr. Harley is being misled by a small group that has its own political agenda and financial interest in waging a campaign against and the

In particular, two NGO’s have actively circulated rumors and false accusations against and my clients for over 3 years. As they have no evidence to support their claims, they have fabricated meaningless lists of accusations and accusers, none of which would withstand the scrutiny of a court or any official investigation. They have gone so far as to enlist the aid of the poor and the marginalized, paying them to tell lies, and causing friction, fear and hatred amongst their own people.

These NGO’s have regularly circulated rumors about the tragic case of Trent Keegan, and, we can only assume, it was they who invited Trent to Tanzania in the first place. Let me be clear. My clients have nothing but sympathy for Trent Keegan’s family and friends. Theirs is an unfathomable loss. That said, neither my clients, nor nor had anything to do with his tragic death and did not even know who he was or that he was working on a story until the day a journalist called them to ask for a comment about his death.

The fact that Mr. Harley believes my clients had something to do with Trent Keegan’s tragic death in Kenya makes it absolutely clear that he has not done his research. The following facts lead my clients to believe that Mr. Harley has not done his due diligence as a journalist:

1. Mr. Harley’s trip to Tanzania was orchestrated entirely by my clients’ detractors, the very same people who started rumors about and in the first place.

2. These detractors showed Mr. Harley only their side of the story, excluding the voices of supporters of and and relying instead on second and third hand rumors. My clients have spoken to a number of key community members who confirm that no attempt was made to contact them about this documentary. Further, no employees of or were contacted during his stay.

3. In Mr. Harley’s own words, he confirms that these detractors told him that Daniel Yamat, the project manager for Enashiva, was a man to be feared. Mr. Harley simply took their word for it, and neglected to make any contact with arguably the most important source in the story. Far from fearing the source of this mischaracterization has been known to run into Yamat at the local market and have a courteous exchange with him.

Mr. Harley made no attempt to qualify the baseless description of [redacted] with us, with community members or with [redacted] himself. The fact is [redacted] is not only widely known in the community as being a fair and capable manager, he is eminently approachable, being a regular fixture at local markets, community meetings and gatherings. In fact, he is regularly and actively approached for advice and collaboration by families, teachers, students and local officials. In September of this year, he was even invited as the guest of honor at the graduation ceremony of a local high school. In addition, he has hosted dozens of [redacted] guests who have found him to be a kind and generous host and gracious representative of Tanzania’s people.
Among these guests was the U.S. Ambassador to Tanzania.

4. While Mr. Harley was embedded with these detractors, he had ample opportunity to contact [redacted] or [redacted] before, during and after his visit to Tanzania. The first time my clients heard of the documentary, however, was via email (dated September 27, 2010), when he informed them that he would be arriving on a flight into Boston the following evening (September 28, 2010). When he met with [redacted] and [redacted] on September 29, it was for barely one hour. This hardly makes for a balanced investigation. At my suggestion, given the circumstances and clear bias, I recommended they not go on camera.

5. Mr. Harley asked my clients about specific allegations lodged against them by Brian MacCormaic, a friend of Trent Keegan. These would easily have been cleared up had he spoken to [redacted] or to the grazing committee who witnessed Mr.
MacCormaic’s disrespectful, disruptive and irrational behavior at one of their meetings with my clients.

6. Mr. Harley suggested that my clients were in possession of documents from Trent Keegan’s laptop. The only documents they have were personally handed to them by Brian MacCormaic, addressed to [redacted] and annotated by Brian in Brian’s own hand, or culled from Brian’s website, African Farmer’s Journal. Nonetheless, Mr. Harley continued to press this point in an attempt to link [redacted] to the death. It is preposterous.

7. The translations provided to Mr. Harley during his stay in Tanzania are, I believe, unreliable. Another journalist, who used a translator with well known affiliations to those who hosted Mr. Harley, was caught on video omitting positive statements about [redacted] and [redacted] from his translation.

8. Kenyan authorities have never contacted, questioned or investigated [redacted] or [redacted] in relation to Trent Keegan’s death, for there is no reason to do so. The Kenyan authorities have compelling evidence against a known criminal who is currently under investigation for a similar crime in the same neighborhood and Mr. Hartley is aware of it.
Jane Wrightson, Jeff Latch and Jude Callen

As you know, it is the duty of a responsible journalist not only to collect information but also to ascertain the veracity of that information and the credibility of its sources. Mr. Harley noted that speaking to Maasai sources who are supportive of [redacted] does not necessarily negate the information he received from the detractors of [redacted]. I would argue that Mr. Harley has no way of making such a determination until he actually hears what those supporters have to say.

The Maasai communities around Enashiva— not just those provided to Mr. Harley by one small group with an agenda—deserve to have their voices heard. Key government sources that have information about the allegations Mr. Harley has raised, including the case of Trent Keegan, should be interviewed. The story cannot be balanced without these voices.

Mr. Harley is obviously very passionate about this story and has formed bonds with the Keegan family, including Trent’s brother-in-law who served as his cameraman.

I have ample reason to believe that my friends and clients will be portrayed unfairly in this documentary. I wish we were across the street from one another so we could talk further about this matter but unfortunately, I am not.

I urge you to hold Mr. Harley accountable for the content of his film. It is sufficiently clear to me that he has not conducted a balanced investigation and that his bias precludes him from doing so.

Please call me if you want any further information.

This conversation is important not only for my friends and clients, and the Maasai, but for those important values of fairness and truth.

Very truly yours,

[Signature]

Subject: Susanna's summary of gov landgrab

Susanna blogged about the PM's statement. (I love how she titles this a brief summary!) I don't think there is much of interest in this but if you want to know her understanding of the history of the land/information she has been given, go for it. Believe it or not, we are not mentioned in this post!

Brief Summary of the – Hopefully Now Forever Stopped – Plan of Grabbing 1,500km2 from the Maasai of Loliondo

The Government of has repeatedly declared interest in taking 1,500km2 of important dry season grazing land bordering from the Maasai of Loliondo and divisions of Ngorongoro District.

Under the provisions of the Village Land Act No 5 of 1999 – and under customary land tenure since as long as can be remembered - this land belongs to the villagers of Ololosokwan, Soitsambu, Oloipiri, Oloirien, Maaloni, Arash, Malambo and Piyaya – and the land is also of vital seasonal importance for pastoralists beyond the borders of these villages. The loss of this land would signify the destruction of tens of thousands of lives and livelihoods.

In 1992 Otterlo Business Corporation – OBC – that arranges hunting trips for royalty from the United Arab Emirates got a hunting permit (hunting block) for the whole of the 4,000km2 Loliondo Game Controlled Area and the core hunting area falls within the 1.500km2 in conflict. The hunting block was handed over in a scandal still remembered as Loliondogate and the permit has since kept being renewed. There have been many allegations of OBC breaking all hunting laws and the company has made constructions within 10 metres from a vital water source for wildlife and for residents of Soitsambu, Kirtalo, Ololosokwan and Arash.

In 2004 the Government and Frankfurt Zoological Society proposed the establishment of a Wildlife Management Area in Loliondo. This idea was decidedly rejected.

In 2008 TANAPA erected border beacons on the village. These beacons were destroyed by villagers.

When the hunting season was approaching in the drought year of 2009 the Field Force Unit assisted by OBC started evicting people from the 1,500km2. Houses were burned down and many cattle were lost, while 7-year old Nashipai Gume disappeared in the chaos and has never been found.

The reasons given for the human rights abuses were protection of wildlife corridors and water catchments – and the Maasai were accused of being invaders from. These are also the reasons that have been used to justify the land grab plan.

In 2010 a constitutional case was initiated by several CSOs against, among others, the Minister for Natural Resources and Tourism and OBC.

The evicted people eventually moved back.

In 2010 Wildlife Conservation Act of 2009 came into effect. Game Controlled Areas had previously not affected grazing and agriculture and Loliondo GCA overlaps in its totality with registered village land, but with the new act such activities are restricted and GCA is now the name for a kind of protected area. The act also states that GCAs and village land are no longer allowed to overlap.
Towards the end of 2010/beginning of 2011 a non-participatory draft Land Use Plan for Ngorongoro District was exposed. In this plan the Government’s intention of taking a “corridor” of 1,500km2 as the new kind of GCA that’s a protected area is made public. The making of this Land Use Plan had been financed by OBC. The plan was vigorously rejected.

In 2011 the was requested to hand in its village land certificate – which was refused.

Some leaders “reconciled” with OBC and some thought that the Government had been defeated.

In November 2012 it was found that TANAPA again had border beacons stored at Klein’s Gate. There were big demonstrations and the beacons were dumped inside the national park by the villagers.

After ambiguous “stakeholders” meetings, in March 2013 the Minister for Natural Resources and Tourism, Khamis Kagasheki, announced that the Government would take the 1,500km2. Though to justify this land grab the Minister brazenly lied that the people of Loliondo were “landless” and would be given 2.500km2. Then he went on making announcement after announcement and press conference after press conference. Big meetings were organised in various villages where people decided to fight against the land grab plan.

There were reports of people handing in their CCM cards and governing party representatives went to Loliondo for damage control. CCM’s Deputy Secretary General Mwigulu Nchemba expressed support for the people of Loliondo. The opposition party Chadema also arrived, and MPs Tundu Lissu and Peter Mzigwa spoke up in parliament.

Several delegations from Loliondo travelled to and to meet people in power. Kagasheki’s vociferous campaign full of lies died down after Prime Minister Mizengo Pinda issued a letter to the Regional Commissioner for Arusha saying that the land did indeed belong to the villages and people would be seriously affected by losing the 1.500km2. The PM’s letter however talked about surveying what “infrastructure” there was and did not show an understanding for pastoralism.

Besides the tireless work of the local NGOs several international organisations voiced their support for the people of Loliondo.

In July 2013 Frankfurt Zoological Society were again researching to “assess community acceptance for a WMA”, and saying that they had German funds for land use plans.

On 3rd September a team from the Ministry for Lands, Housing and Human Settlements Developments started a survey of the villages of Loliondo and . The following morning they were ordered to stop and return to.

On 23rd September Prime Minister Mizengo Pinda at a meeting in Wasso declared, according to people who were present, that the plan of taking the 1.500km2 had been stopped, that the land belonged to the Maasai and their coming generations and that the Minister for Natural Resources and Tourism would no longer be allowed to bother them – the people of Loliondo were told to continue their lives as before his statements.

The Prime Minister’s statement is cause for celebration – but in newspaper articles things do not look quite as good. In the Mwananchi the General Manager of OBC is quoted and he seems to look forward to new Land Use Plans. It’s also a fact that the land grab plan is much older than Kagasheki’s time as Minister for Natural Resources and Tourism.

I would stay very vigilant while celebrating.

I talked with [REDACTED] this a.m. He returns from Loliondo tomorrow.

The PM has said that the gov. has backed away from the plan that KSK put in place. No one needs to be concerned about that anymore, the Loliondo GCA is remaining how it is for now. The gov. will be working on how to best proceed.

At one meeting [REDACTED] felt a urge to speak and gave a short but passionate (almost to the point of tears) delivery making a point that she was speaking as a Tz woman and not representing any co. or organization.

The PM made an impromptu visit to the Soit Sambu Secondary School and visited the recently completed girls dorm. There was no fan fare because it was not planned. At least he can now see the work done by [REDACTED] at that school.

[REDACTED] feels the visit by the PM has defused the crisis over land.

I just called [REDACTED] to get an update, he is still in Loliondo.

All is calm, not much going on. [REDACTED] has made some statement about how things will be back to how they always were before [REDACTED] made change. So perhaps this is what the swede is talking about, but we will have to wait for the official news I suppose. But seems that the 1,500sqkm bit of Loli along the SNP boundary will not be anything special per what [REDACTED] was doing. Nothing affects us.

As I hear more I will let you know.

Susanna reports that she has heard it has gone very well but there has been no official news yet. She says her sources tell her: PM said that the land was theirs and for coming generations and Kagasheki will not be allowed to bother them anymore.
I'm not positive about the outcome today but Susanna seems happy - saying she has good news about Pinda - which probably doesn't bode well for us... (?)

BTW, there is a mention in this article (6th, or so, paragraph down)

The local residents of Loliondo and Sale are Maasai and Sonjo communities who for years have also been arch-enemies while the foreign investors include the hunting firm, Ortello Business Corporation, the camping tourism firm, [redacted] and luxury lodge operators.

Dear

Apologies for my silence yesterday – it was a busy day for me with visits from Ministry of Tourism and Natural Resources regarding non-cons fees, a meeting at... about financial consultancy, unexpected visitors regarding Loliondo borehole and... and I trying to wind up her visit and our analysis of our systems here at... Hi
I am with you 100%. may remember that the next day, after our meeting with Brian, we sent a text message to thank us for helping him. Also, what you don’t know is that Brian handed me a copy of the work on Trent’s computer. It included a missive about how we should fire and you and all the guys, and do all kinds of things, and then it was copies of what was on Trent’s computer. I included some of that information in the big letter we wrote to RC and was then also cc’d to the DC. So, we need to thank Brian for giving us the copy. I will find it and send it to all of you so you are in the loop.

I believe the police have recovered the computer and if they felt we were a part of Trent’s murder, I am sure they would be knocking at our door. Brian, et al, are a vigilante group that should be stopped. We are all tired of being harassed and I am surprised at how people like the and are willing to jump into the group without understanding or wanting to understand what is the truth.

is there anything you can do to help with these issues? Or what suggestions do you have. I know you and have been debating the idea of exposure for some important circles... but what you suggest at the political level? Do you agree with going directly to the

Dear [Redacted],

I have read Brian's email like three times to make sure whether what I was reading is what is written. It can't get into my brains, it's hard to believe that people are talented to tell false stories and making up stories like that.

My suggestion is that, I feel that, you as investors in this country should write a letter to the President complaining about this, the Tanzanian Government has promised the investors that they will operate smoothly in this country, now you have enough truth that you have been recently getting a lot of disturbance to the extent of ruining the reputation of your company.

The Government should be able to tell you at this point whether is going to finish up this chaos or not. In fact it should stop inviting potential investors if it can not protect the existing one.

If you allow me, I will print this and give it to the DC to read. I also agree with you in your last email saying the Prime Minister don't need to form a committee to investigate on Sukenya Farm, because the Government knows the truth and the company knows the truth.

I think the Tanzanian Government need to contact the Kenyan Government to tell about Brian McMaile, he is such a confused person I have ever met in my life and I am sure I will never meet someone like him as he is probably the only one existing on planet earth at the moment.

How can he dear saying that the articles which were presented to the DC were downloaded from Keegan's computer? if so why don't he report to Kenyan Police that he knows people who murdered Keegan? He is totally out of his senses, I am sure he need to go to a mental hospital.

I think, there is also a need to contact the Irish Embassy wherever, be it in Dar or Nairobi or US and tell everything about Brian. I am even shaken for the fact that he called himself a potential donor for the Emanyatta school, in fact the school is totally a ruin and I was surprised to learn that they were planning to build a tourist centre at the school instead of building and renovating classrooms, dormitories, laboratory (no one there), a library (no one there).

One woman called [Redacted] from [Redacted] was here some weeks ago, asked me to talk to her. I met her and infact I took her to Enashiva and later we talked about Maanda and Brian (she doesn't know him) but told her the whole story and even showed her a proposal that Brian was writing for the school about the tourist centre, she was shocked because she knows the school very well and the awful situation that it is in at the moment.

This is what I can think at the moment.

Kind regards,

Hi ___________

We noticed that Brian MacCormaic is writing again and asking people to spread this info to all their contacts. He is trying to start trouble again. I thought you would be interested to see what he has to say about that day when he visited our meeting at Wasso. Incredible how he has exaggerated everything. Read about how 10 armed gunmen skidded to a halt and surrounded him...... It seems he was at a different meeting to us..... There were so many witnesses there on that day, they will be very surprised to learn what he is saying here.

__________ will not belive this one. ___________ please pass this on to her.

The only reason I called Brian was because of a meeting with ___________ and ___________ in Arusha, and now I wish I had not done so. Brian has totally twisted this whole event into a situation to advance his cause. It seems Brian now thinks we planned this whole thing, wow. To start with there is no way I contacted him to seek his help to get to the truth! Why would I do that, I know the truth and would certainly not ask advice from Brian. That is just the opening sentence and then it goes from silly to outright lies as those who were also there can attest to.

Let me know your thoughts on this. Thanks, ___________

Here is the complete blog. No comments yet but it was only just posted.

Follow-up to Maasai Dispute

(a lot of reading, I know, but please do your best to get through it)

After you’ve read this Journal, please pass it on to all your contacts, and seek the support of your government to demand a full and independent inquiry into all of these events!

THE TRUTH CANNOT HURT THE INNOCENT!

I write this as a follow-up to my previous Journal (attached), on the death of my friend Trent Keegan, including some worrying events that have taken place since his murder.
Trent Keegan hailed from New Zealand, but had worked in Ireland for many years as a photographer and freelance photojournalist. He was murdered in Nairobi only a few days after staying with me in Tanzania, where he had been investigating a story about alleged attacks on local Maasai herdsmen by the security guards of Thomson Safaris and local policemen.
According to Trent’s report, several herdsmen have been beaten, while one was shot and badly wounded. Women have also been attacked and beaten and dumped far away from their homes, having to walk up to 10km to get home. One pregnant woman miscarried after being attacked and abducted; while another, who was seven months pregnant, gave birth prematurely and lost her infant four days later, according to Trent.
The Arusha Times of 17 May last, reported that Thomson’s have been trying to stop local Maasai herdsmen from grazing their cattle at the Sukunya Farm. The company had intended to begin using the farm for tourist activities in May last, hence their determination and urgency to ban or exclude the local herdsmen from the area.
The land in question, which is close to the Serengeti National Park and the Kenyan Masai Mara, is a pristine and beautiful landscape. This is, in no small way, as a result of the traditional grazing methods of the Maasai, which ensured that land is not overgrazed, and wildlife is left unharmed. For many Maasai, the animals represent their forebears, and as such, are allowed to go unharmed. They live off the produce of their own herds of domesticated cattle and goats, and will only hunt in times of severe shortage or drought.
The Maasai don’t see this as ‘wildlife conservation’ as such; they see it as self-preservation: avoid a snake or lion and it will normally leave you alone. And just as zebra, impala and wildebeest will often graze together to increase their chances of detecting predators, so too will herds of wild animals act as a very effective early-warning system for Maasai herdsmen.
Occasionally, during ceremonial passage rites into manhood for young Maasai Warriors, lions are hunted and killed. However, despite condemnations by so-called conservationists, this bears no comparison to the massive slaughter, to this day, by tourists taking part in game hunting safaris in private Game Reserves in the region.
The land at Sukunya was originally leased by Tanzania Breweries Ltd, and subsequently sold to Thomson’s, although the Maasai insist that TBL didn’t own the land in the first place, and had “forged fake Maasai names ..., giving them permission to buy the land”, according to Trent’s report.
The restrictions which have now been put in place effectively prevents the local Maasai from the Irmasiling Location from reaching the District hospital at Wasso, and the market town of Loliondo; forcing them to detour across the border into Kenya and back to Tanzania via the villages of Soitsambu or Ololosokwan. Likewise, grazing and water sources are restricted now, causing great hardship to the herdsmen, and leading to conflict with the Thomson Safari guards: “a battle did ensue between the company guards and a team of Maasai men who had taken their cattle to drink at a brook which runs between the Sukunya farm and the Maasai settlement at Irmasiling”, according to Robert Ole Nyangusi, Thomson Safari’s assistant camp manager at Loliondo, as quoted in the Arusha Times.
When Trent was in the area carrying out his investigations, he was approached by Thomson guards in this particular area. He told me later that he felt very threatened by their behaviour, and felt so unsafe that he decided to leave Tanzania and return to Nairobi as soon as possible.
At first impression though, when Trent’s body was found face down in a storm drain in Nairobi’s busy Uhuru Highway, it seemed likely that he was simply the unfortunate victim of a mugging that went terribly wrong, in a city where muggings are not uncommon. However, the strange thing about this particular attack was that Trent’s laptop and camera were apparently the only items stolen, while his cash, passport, visa cards, and many other valuables he was carrying were left untouched by his killers. His laptop and camera have never been recovered by the police, despite some confusing reports to the contrary.
After his death, many people, including the Nairobi police, suspected some more sinister motive than mere theft, with some suggesting there might be a possible connection between Thomson Safaris, whom Trent was investigating, and his killers. This is further compounded by the fact that Thomson’s manager later produced files which would appear to have come from Trent’s computer.
Obviously upset by the adverse affect this was having on their business, two directors of Thomson’s, Rick Thomson and Judi Wineland visited Tanzania recently to try to get to the bottom of the allegation against their staff in the land dispute; and also to try to clear their company’s name in relation to Trent’s murder.
The two claimed to be anxious to talk to as many local people as possible to get the full story, and it seemed, during my initial contacts with them at least, that they were genuinely interested in finding out the truth, and coming to some satisfactory conclusion for all concerned.
I was contacted by Rick, and asked if I would meet with them to help them get to the truth. Strangely though, Rick was unwilling to come to my home to meet (despite having a virtual fleet of safari vehicles at his command), and asked me to travel the 45km to where they were staying at a guest house in the compound of the district hospital. Although I don’t have transport and would have to hitch a ride, I was anxious to help in whatever way I could, and agreed to meet them at the hospital. However, Rick’s unwillingness to go out of his way to meet me rang some alarm bells in my mind about the sincerity of his ‘fact-finding’ mission.
When I arrived, despite my previous insistence that we meet alone, they insisted I join a meeting they were already having with some people who, it seems, were a hand-picked committee selected by the local District Commissioner. I was later informed that this group was not delegated by the Village Government to represent them in negotiations with Thomson’s, and few of those present even knew what their precise function or role was. The Village Government in fact, had been waiting patiently since the previous day in Soitsambu, having been requested to meet with Rick and Judi; (the Village Government is the democratically elected representative body for the people at village level, and is a primary link in the Tanzanian democratic system, right up to parliament and the
Against my better judgement I eventually agreed to join their meeting, although on entering the room, I immediately sensed an atmosphere of hostility against me, as if my arrival had been anticipated and discussed beforehand. I felt very uncomfortable, and made a number of attempts to leave the meeting, but was delayed each time on some pretext or other. Eventually though, I simply stood up, excused myself, and left. This obviously upset some plan they were hatching against me, as everyone in the room followed me outside as I left.

Suspecting something was afoot, I immediately rang a friend and asked him to contact the Irish embassy if he didn’t hear from me within the hour. Sounds a bit like John Wayne I suppose: “If I’m not back within the hour, send in the Posse!” However, this was serious stuff, and after losing a close friend to murderers only weeks before, I didn’t want to take any chances.

I began to leave the compound, but was told I was not allowed to leave. I insisted that I was free to go wherever I pleased unless I was under arrest.

With that, (and I promise I’m not exaggerating), a Thomson Safaris vehicle sped into the compound and skidded to a halt beside me, raising a cloud of dust and loose gravel in the air. Before it had fully stopped, up to ten gunmen armed with rifles and machine guns jumped out and took up positions, military-style, around the compound, effectively preventing me from leaving.

I’m no hero by any means, so I suppose I should have been scared for my life. But somehow, although I strongly believed I was about to be taken away to be beaten or shot, the only emotion I felt, and the only defence I could think of at the time, was anger and rage. As they say, I ‘flipped my lid’ and demanded of Rick and Judi why I was being detained against my will by their gunmen, after I had come, at their invitation, to try to help them resolve some of their difficulties with the local community. I was informed that these were the local police force, which had been ordered to detain me by the local District Commissioner, (although I’ve never been able to fully verify this).

And why, I demanded to know, did the police arrive in a Thomson’s vehicle? Ludicrously, Judi tried to justify this by saying the police can commandeer any vehicle they wish, and it was a mere coincidence that they just happened to find a Thomson’s vehicle to commandeer at that particular moment.

Come on Judi, give us a break!

Understandably, she didn’t pursue that line of argument any further.

The real coincidence though, is that in Trent’s investigation (a copy of which is attached below) he refers to allegations of collusion between the police force and Thomson’s: “Maasai herdsman have been attacked, beaten, shot and bribed or charged horrific fees by Thomson Safari guards and police acting it seems on TS’s behalf”. So if these were actually members of the police force, then here was the evidence of that same collusion taking place, right before our very eyes; and under the orders of the DC too, as I had been informed!

I realised that earlier suspicions I had about Rick’s insincerity were justified: that I had been set up from the start to discredite me in some way. But thankfully his plan backfired, and the large crowd which had gathered from the nearby hospital to watch the spectacle, witnessed their bullying tactics at first hand. One kindly, if somewhat insensitive man asked why such a large force had been sent to arrest ‘an old man’ like me.

The gunmen looked decidedly uncomfortable now, and seemed ill at ease as to what to do next; while Rick looked decidedly embarrassed that some idiot had sent in the troops prematurely, with so many people around; and understandably, the crowd looked on with sheer delight at the whole fiasco, delighted at the diversion from their own troubles at the hospital. I suppose some were secretly hoping I’d be shot, just to add some additional drama and excitement to the spectacle.

After over an hour of me shouting and arguing for my release, and probably due in no small way to the embarrassing scene I was creating for them, I was allowed to leave and make my way home. Tellingingly though, a Lutheran bishop who had accompanied the “Punch Rick&Judi Show” on their ‘peace mission’, advised me quietly not to take my normal route home for fear of attack. He was however, obviously unfamiliar with the area: it had already reached darkness, and other than travelling through bush and forests, with elephants, hyenas, lions and leopards roaming freely, there was only one road I could take home.

Thankfully though, I arrived safely, and without further incident, but still ‘hopping mad’. As we passed through Soitsambu village on the way, I met with some members of the Village Government who had been there since the previous day waiting to meet Rick and Judi. They were understandably angry at being snubbed by the two, yet none seemed too surprised.

Rick and Judi demonstrated their insincerity and lack of consideration later though, when neither thought to show me the courtesy of calling to see if I had arrived home safely, or to apologise for all the trouble and danger they had put me through - an indication of their true cold-hearted nature perhaps. And yet, even after all that had happened, I was still willing to give them the benefit of the doubt, and tried repeatedly to ring them and text them, to see if we could salvage anything from the day’s fiasco. To this day, I’ve received no answer or reply!

Next day I received a letter from the DC demanding that I report to his office the following morning, where I appeared before the District Security Committee. I was questioned at length, like some sort of criminal, about my presence in Tanzania, and my association with Trent in particular.

The DC later produced files he had apparently been given by Thomson’s manager, which appeared to have been downloaded or ‘hacked’ from my computer. Perhaps more disturbing and sinister though, is the fact that he produced files which appear to have been downloaded from Trent’s computer. As you will be aware, Trent’s laptop was stolen by his killers, and has not been recovered since.

It would therefore seem fair to assume that they (his killers) are the only ones with access to his computer now!

When I asked the DC for copies of the files in his possession, so that I might try to identify how they had been accessed, particularly in relation to Trent’s files, he flatly refused. It seems, in his view, any allegations that staff of Thomson Safaris are attacking, beating and shooting ‘his’ community, or might be somehow associated with Trent’s murderers, are unworthy of any investigation or serious attention; while my presence as a potential donor, at the invitation of the local community to help in the development of a secondary school for Maasai children; and Trent’s investigations into attacks on local people, are serious felonies worthy of his full attention. I can’t honestly say that Thomson Safaris were involved in Trent’s murder. I don’t even know at first hand if the allegations about attacks on the local community are true. But from my personal experience of their self-serving and ruthless hypocrisy which I witnessed on that day, I can just about believe anything of them now.

But whether they like it or not, all of these allegations and suspicions need to be investigated fully; and the real truth MUST be exposed. However, since the Maasai have no real voice outside Tanzania, this will only happen if the whole world is aware of what is being claimed, and demands answers. Without this, the story might conveniently be hidden away in the hope that it is quietly forgotten. If true though, and nothing is done to expose them, then local people will continue to suffer attacks and brutality, eventually being moved off their land entirely, with their rich and valuable culture, and their lives destroyed forever.

And why should I be concerned?? Well, I remember a promise I made to a good friend when police came to question him about his activities in the region: “Brian, keep these files safe just in case anything happens…” Trent Keegan felt passionate about this story and he was not being melodramatic – that wasn’t his style – just practical.

I suppose also, I remember my feelings of utter helplessness and deep-deep sadness and shame at the plight of the American Indians when I read Dee Brown’s ‘Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee’ for the first time. I remember asking myself how I might have reacted had I been there at that particular moment in history: would I have spoken out in protest? Or would I have sat idly by like so many others at the time?

If I fail to make my voice heard in protest against the self-same physical and cultural genocide which appears to be taking place against the Maasai today, then, to my eternal shame, I will have my answer.

I would appeal to you to forward this email to everyone in your address book and mailing list.

PS. As far as I am aware, Thomson Safaris has no connection with the European based Thomson Travel, and no connection or involvement in these events is intended.

Hi thank you for your email.

I do not feel that our email correspondence is leading to any meaningful solution. Also, as the court case is ongoing, I do not feel it is appropriate to be communicating with you in this way. The appropriate way to continue with discussions of this kind is through an independent intermediary person/organization, and I understand Thomson is working on finding a suitable body. One of PWC partner might be willing to get involved.

I hope that you understand my position.

Subject: RE: urgent request

Maanda,

Sorry for the delay in getting back to you. We all seem to travel regularly. I just wanted to give you a quick update.

The Division Secretary, Nicholas, conducted a water survey of the Pololet and other seasonal sources on August 19, 2010. He can provide you or anyone else with an official report. There were other independent sources who made the tour. The Secretary found that, as is typical during the dry season, there is no standing water whatsoever currently in the Pololet riverbed. Similarly, the Secretary found that there were herders with cattle at the Lotimi seep. Again, this report conflicts with the allegations you made earlier. How could pastoralists be blocked from a water source if there was no water at that time?

When these kinds of allegations are made, it is in both of our best interests to have independent, unbiased third parties thoroughly investigate the issues and for both sides to cooperate and take part in the investigations. In this case, it was not anyone directly from Soit Sambu or Mondorosi besides you who made the allegations. If you want to provide us with the people you claim were making these allegations, or provide them to the Division Secretary, I am sure that any misunderstandings can be cleared up and resolved.
There are countless other baseless claims that PWC has made and that disputes. We feel these fabrications are only being used as propaganda against further the political agenda of a few at the expense of communities. For example, a staff member, who is also a member of the local community, was assaulted by Tariya Meitaya in May of 2009 and a judge in Loliondo proved that our staff member had been wounded by a short sword by Mr. Meitaya. Our local staff of Maasai have informed us that Tariya Meitaya is, of course, a close relative of Dismas Partala Meitaya, who has worked with UCRT and has openly campaigned against Enashiva and co-authored a chapter of a book along with you, your husband, and Fred Nelson concerning

While you write extensively about the marginalization of the Laitaiyok in that book, you also erroneously write that staff have resigned because of land issues. In four years, only one staff member has resigned and he did so to pursue further education. He continues to work with temporarily and hopes to return to do so in the future. Again, none of the information in this so-called case study was verified and it was reported as fact without any substantive evidence. We could go back and forth with countless examples like these.

Ultimately, we remain open to finding resolution with your organization. Perhaps we could seek out an independent unbiased, professional third party who will thoroughly investigate all issues and sides. The honourable Member of Parliament, has, of course, spent time with us both and talked about playing such a role. As he will likely win re-election on October 31, perhaps this is a dialogue that we can begin later in the year.

We are encouraged by a growing grassroots movement both in Mondonorosi and in communities surrounding Enashiva to collaborate with on community, conservation, and natural resource management initiatives. There are many new developments in communities and at Enashiva that will have dramatic effects in the near future.

We will be sure to keep you posted and to look for future opportunities to find resolution.

Best Regards,

Hi

I was out of communication for while just back and see your email. Asante.

In relation to your last email, yes this is not the first time we are seeing and experiencing contradicting information and reports around this issue. The Last meeting which was on July 27th was attended by 25 people. Martin Kanchwel the school chairman organized this meeting as he was ordered by the community on July 23rd. Mondonorosi chairman Mr Olomo was not present. But Olepolos chair attended. Sandet Reiya a traditional leader also attended not as a traditional leader but as a member of the school committee Manyara single woman was present as member too.

Based on the recent voter’s registration there over 2,476 people in Mondonorosi, Irmasiling and enadooshoke. Somehow is almost impossible for 25 community members to decide on sensitive matters like this one.

Water problem was not even discussed in this meeting. It was all about how to start school construction and make use of Thompson contributions. The chairman informed the meeting that on 23rd July community refused the offer. The chairman asked the division secretary to take this matter to Soitsambu village government and not otherwise.

The division secretary was asked to advice Thompson to work with legitimate entity like village government. Participants refused to sign the attendance papers. They feared that their signatures might be easily used or twisted to fit Thompson interest.

Normally the official meeting minutes must be signed by all participants and reviewed in the next school meeting to determine whether what is written is what is stipulated previously or agreed. Then a school chairman with a secretary who is always the headmaster would sign in font of all participants. This is what we call official school minutes.

If you want to cross check this information I can link you to one of CRT lawyer from Mondorosi who have been monitoring the whole issue closely. Meanwhile I think this discussion should be OVER as the community has already contributed a significant amount to continue with their school construction.

In relation to water survey, PWC is only interested with what the community wants and what is beneficial to the current and future generations. Community WANTS their land back it is what sustains their livelihoods, rights over the land is our bottom line and our future communication should based around resolving land dispute FIRST. Access to natural water springs like Ilotimi, Pololet, and grazing rights and how to create a balanced situation that is acceptable and beneficial for the community adjusted to the disputed land and your company. As I said in my previous emails, this can only happen if you accept to engage in a transparent dialogue with the involvement of a third party.

Very best wishes
Maanda

Dear Maanda,

Greetings. I have yet to receive a response from my previous emails to you, but I do hope that you are well.

Please note that the Division Secretary has called for the water survey to happen this Thursday,' August 19, 2010. It is my understanding that village and district officials are being informed.
While this is now a district and village matter, you are welcome at Enashiva to join in the survey, as will any other representative from your organization, seeing as you made the original request. We will be sending one of its representatives and the survey will be well-documented for the sake of transparency. Furthermore, any representatives of African initiatives are also welcome at Enashiva if they happen to be in Tanzania and Ngorongoro District at this time. I think it is important to also invite one of PWC’s supporters, as they have made allegations about blocking communities from water sources in the past of course, has and will continue to deny such baseless allegations.

Please contact the Division Secretary for more details or

Dear Maanda,

Not sure you had a chance to read my previous email. I didn’t see a response from you but perhaps you are traveling again.

I am cc’ing Carrell on my emails since I believe she is truly committed to helping to find a win-win resolution to any misunderstandings that might have arisen between PWC and in the past.

I am writing to you because I continue to get conflicting information and truly want to try to work with you and the community of Mondorosi. First, I hope that you will join a tour and water survey of the Pololet and other sources. I have visited Enashiva during the dry season and we have had water experts in the area in the past. The Pololet is almost always completely dry in the dry season. But let us have the officials and others on the water survey look at the situation.

I have received other information that confuses me and conflicts with yours. For example, the District Water Council claimed not to know of any plans to repair the water pump and generator at Mondorosi. It is not in their budget and they have not been working with any organization to resolve the issue. Yet you write, "The District council water department, PWC and the community have taken immediate action to fix it soon as we can." With no water in the Pololet, it seems like fixing the water pump would be a quick short-term fix to the current water issues in Mondorosi and it would benefit the community as a whole — both families and cattle — far more than just 500 cows. It could also open up a dialogue about how to establish other long-term sustainable projects.

Similarly, you wrote, "The community at Mondorosi thinks that after meeting this Friday that refused to accept money for the school led to decision to denied access to water." I wanted to find out more about this meeting but now have been told that there was an official meeting held at Mondorosi Primary School recently (not on Friday) and it was attended by the chairmen of the Mondorosi and Enado Ooshoke, council members, district officials, teachers, parents, traditional leaders, and many others. I have received a copy of the meeting minutes, including all of those in attendance. There was a lot of positive debate and discussion, and ultimately communities and leaders asked to collaborate with on various projects.

Anyway, I look forward to your response so that I can get a better understanding of these conflicting reports. I am not trying to twist your words, Maanda, I am reporting what officials have given to me.

Dear

I was away and now back, I want to clarify my last email to you and my position. I am afraid that you have not understood me or twisted the meaning of my words.

First I’m not representing any village, I’ wrote you an email as a resident of both Mondorosi and Irmasiling.

On Sunday I received over 10 phone calls from Irmasling and Modondorosi explain how over 500 cows were denied access to water. I was very upset to hear that livestock were being denied access to the oltimi water source and the pollelet river on the disputed property. This is why I decided to talk to you strait away. This was not a request from any village and please do not think that it was.

The purpose of my email was to inform you of the situation to make sure you were aware what was happening and that maasai communities were losing access to important waters sources on the disputed property bought by thomons. I was not requesting your assistance to fix the mendorosi water pump.

The District council water department, PWC and the community have taken immediate action to fix it soon as we can. We totally did not ask to help. What we want from you is to allow access to natural streams allocated in the disputed property but not to help in the repair. I think you do not understand the difference between helping someone by giving some small temporary money or their need for access to grazing land and water for their families livelihoods for generations and generations. This is why the community of mendorosi decided not to take your money for the school, saying they cannot trade this money for their land.

The cows belong to Mondorosi community and Irmasiling. The village chairman tried to reach but was not reachable, but he spoke to one of the over the same. Yes the district council is aware of the need. It is one of they are responsibility to fix with the community.

About your statement of my meeting with Few weeks ago I was on the way to Loliondo market, saw me and approached and I promised him that we should meet and discuss the problem. In fact I told him my interest is only to see people getting some lands back. Since I was on rush we planned to meet sometimes. But did not discuss or decide on anything. The meet as like 5 minutes words exchange.

I am not a gate keeper between the community and but as a member of the village, and as the coordinator of PWC and as a district councilor, I’m ready to be among those who can facilitate a transparent and open dialogue. For this to happen it is important that you meet with the community from the three sections surrounding the disputed property.

Again I think should discuss with the official Soitsambu village government as they have been requesting for years.

The village council of soit-sambu told invites owners to discuss the possibility of solving this problem. This is what is everybody is waiting for. And really advice that you personally as an owner should get involved if you want this problem to be over. As I have always told you.

I’m very sorry but I think my request is not enough to think that we are intending to collaborate for the same thing. The betterment of Maasai community is only possible if they get back they are land.
Since you wrote on your website that we are all working together PWC is in the process to finalize an official statement on what you have been writing on the internet on the relationship between us and you that has never existed.

Best wishes
Maanda

Dear Maanda,

I am very pleased to hear from you, although it does not come without sadness to learn about the ongoing water problems in Mondorosi and throughout Loliondo. I have heard that, like a small gift from God, it rained over this past weekend. Let us hope that will offer some respite for many pastoralists in the area, and let us pray there is more to come soon.

I thank you, the leader of an influential NGO, for taking the initiative to reach out to me. I want to address your concerns as soon as possible, but first I have a few questions. Are you making this request on behalf of the new Mondorosi Village? Or the current interim Soit Sambu Village? Is Ngorongoro District aware of these needs? Whose 500 cows are you speaking about?

I read your Sunday message this Monday morning, July 26. I have already informed [redacted] and will be following up with all [redacted] staff, as I need more information from them as well before I can officially respond to any of your comments at length.

You also mentioned that the water pump is not working in Mondorosi. Please let me know what is required in order to repair this pump. [redacted] is interested in helping. We can do this immediately.

I understand that you recently had a cordial conversation with [redacted]. Interpret this, as well as you reaching out to me, as a very encouraging sign that we are on the road to having [redacted] collaborate with PWC and CRT for the betterment of Maasai communities throughout Loliondo.

Kindest Regards,

Dear [Name],

We have a big problem here, Mondorosi community are very disparate of water problems. We are in the process to fix a water pump. They have been using Pololet River of the last 4 months. Yesterday your guards turn overt 500 livestock preventing them from Pololet water source. And telling them never to come and drink water or even to across the disputed property. I’m writing this email to ask you if you could make an official statement to you staff here to allow the community surroundings the disputed property to use the pololet water and Elotim water.

The village chairman is trying to conduct [Name] and I’m told to find [Name] and DC over the same. It is an urgent situation we know you have offered to help for development this is the most desperate help we need. We do not know if this decision to denied access to water again is made by you or somebody else. The community at Mondorosi thinks that after meeting this Friday that refused to accept [Name] money for the school led to [Name] decision to denied access to water. As since January 2010, we have seen improvement in [Area], allowing the community access to water and grazing, and are shocked by the current change in situation.

We know we are in the middle of the conflict over this property, but please do not harm so many people at this critical stage of drought. Here my mobile phone in case you want to talk to me. +255 785481165.

Looking forward to your quick feedback.

Office of the Arusha Regional Commissioner
Regional Commissioner Isidore Shirima
PO Box 3050
Arusha, Tanzania

Dear Honorable Arusha Regional Commissioner Isidore Shirima,

REQUESTING SUPPORT TO CLEAR THE NAME OF

has been incorporated in Tanzania since 1981. We were the first U.S. based company to invest heavily in tourism to Tanzania. After traveling throughout Eastern and Southern Africa, it became clear to us that Tanzania was the ultimate destination for travelers. Although most companies in the U.S. were selling Kenya as a final destination, we began spreading the word about Tanzania through press releases, advertisements, slide shows, and in partnership with the TTB. We did not add Kenya to our itineraries because we believed that our guests should have two weeks solely in Tanzania.

We now bring Americans for a two-week stays solely in Tanzania. Our investment in Tanzania has grown. Not only do we own and as of recent, 12,000 acres at Sukenya in Loliondo. Our investment has always been with the Tanzanian communities at the heart of what we do.

We are the founding members of an organization, which is dedicated to building school rooms, teachers houses, latrines, and purchasing Tanzanian curriculum books for students. On July 5, 2008, The Citizen published an article entitled, “Firm donates textbooks to Mara School,” which is about our recent donation of 4,500 textbooks worth Sh15 million to Robanda Primary School in the Mara Region. We have provided financial assistance to more than 12 schools that educate approximately 11,000 children each year. Our schools include Sakila Primary School, Kilimani Academy, Ekenywa School, Ngayu School, Shinda Basic School, Ksono School in Arusha, Nainokanoka School and Lake Natron School in Ngorongoro, Sangiti
School in Moshi, Robanda Primary School in the Mara Region, and Ayalabe Primary School in Karatu. Primary donors are travelers who visit Tanzania. They anticipate an increase in their funding to Tanzania and number of projects in the coming years, and schools in Loliondo will definitely be supported.
We have been honored by the Tanzanian government for our commitment to the people of Tanzania when we were given the “Tanzanian Tourist Board Humanitarian Award” (2005) as well as the “Tanzanian Tourist Board Tour Operator of the Year Award” (2003). was recently awarded the highest honor “Lifetime Achievement Award” at the Adventure Travel World Summit in Canada (2007) for her commitment to community service in Tanzania. This past year, we were invited to meet with the Honorable in New York City to thank us for our investment in tourism in Tanzania. It was an honor to be recognized as an important investor in Tanzania.

Unfortunately, our purchase of the titled land in Loliondo has brought name to the forefront in very damaging ways. The Honorable Ngorongoro District Commissioner, has been extremely helpful and supportive of our efforts to bring community based tourism to Loliondo. We want to thank him for his insight, extraordinary leadership, and support in helping us as investors in his community. The village council as well as the vast majority of Maasai elders, men, women, and families who are our neighbors have also been extremely supportive and helpful.

Our investment in Loliondo was made in order to bring American guests to this area, showing them wildlife, introducing them to our neighbors, and providing the community with resources they need. This model is in keeping with our mission of community based tourism. As it is known, the land is in the Sukenya area and was formerly owned by Tanzanian Breweries Limited. The purchase of the land was made through a transparent and legal bidding process.

False reports about in Tanzanian newspapers, television, and international publications as well as well-circulated information by individuals are damaging our reputation. The accusations range from burning bomas, shooting Maasai, exploiting the Maasai, terrorizing the local people, and bribing the local police to act on our behalf. We are requesting that you help us clear our name and protect us from these false and injurious accusations.

In addition, Tanzania’s reputation as a peaceful nation is being challenged by these reports. For investors around the world, these reports could sway them not to invest in Tanzania. We would like to present to you some excerpts that are very damaging to

Much of the recent press is alludes to two incidents: (A) An alleged shooting of a morani, Lesinko ole Nanyoi, in the Sukenya area in late July of 2008. (B) The death of Trent Keegan, who visited Loliondo recently to investigate role in “a tribe that was being kicked off its property to make way for a safari park.” His dead body was found in Nairobi shortly after he left Tanzania in late May. Trent Keegan was in Tanzania for a short period of time and collected information from some sources in the Loliondo area. He also interviewed Lesinko ole Nanyoi at Muhumbili Hospital in Dar es Salaam and took photos of him and his injuries.
We understand that a number of organizations and authorities have looked into these matters within their jurisdictions, including the Tanzanian Police, the Kenyan Police, the Legal and Human Rights Center in Dar es Salaam, and other government officials, such as District Commissioner Kasunga. We have always been supportive and cooperative of such investigations, as we want nothing more than for the truth to be told.

The reports in the media and information circulated among a select group of individuals, however, we believe, have been made with the intention of harming our reputation. Many of them are based on gross misperceptions, hearsay, and false reports.

Here is just small sample of some excerpts and quotes:

1. The Arusha Times, May 17-23, 2008 by Vanentine Marc Nkwame.

   “The Maasai Moran Lesinko Ole Nanyoi was shot and badly wounded during heated confrontations between youths from the villages surrounding and security men employed by.

   “At the moment, Land-rover truck with plate number is the most feared vehicle in the Iramisiling vicinity.”

   “The police in Loliondo say such shot must have been done by an amateur, possibly one of the guards, but the company officials insist their guards did not have fire weapons.”

2. New Zealand Herald June 29, 2008 by Cliff Taylor

   Title: Emails reveal murdered Kiwi’s fear of police

   “The 33-year-old sent the emails last month from northern Tanzania where he was researching claims of a disput between a US-based safari company and local Maasai tribesmen.”

   “Keegan’s notes contain disturbing accounts of Maasai being shot, beaten, arrested and sometimes dumped far from their homes. Two pregnant women suffered miscarriages as a result of their treatment, he said.”

   “He also alleged security guards and police were extorting large bribes from Maasai families to release their menfolk from detention.”

3. Hate Mail to Thomson Safaris from articles printed:

   From: Nigel:
   Subject: From a kiwi
“hope you all rot in a prison somewhere, you murdered a kiwi reporter to hide the fact your staff are killing tribesman,

Hope you all rot in hell”

4. From Trent Keegan’s computer: Provided to [Redacted] by Brian McCormiac (a volunteer from Ireland who was asked by the Pastoral Women’s Council (PWC) to assist in the development and financing of Emanyatta Secondary School in Ololosokwan.) Please note that names were withheld by Brian McCormiac. Because Trent Keegan was in Tanzania for a short period of time, he had to have been provided the following information by someone in the Loliondo area.

“Maasai herdsman have been attacked, beaten, shot and bribed or charged horrific fees by guards and police acting it seems on behalf. Women have miscarried after attacks suffering beatings and stories of being carried off on top of vehicles for some distances expected to walk home.”

guards and police who make these attacks on the Maasai would on most occasions take the herdsman to the national police station in Loliondo village where they are detained only for the families of these herdsman having to pay fees/bribes to get them back. Bribes between 300,000 TSH to 500,000 TSH.”

“Women tending stock have been beaten and dropped in distant areas from their Bomas’s, having to walk 4 – 10 km to get home. Two of these women were pregnant.”

“Mr. Keegan emailed his friend Tim Gallagher on May 16 telling him he was writing a story about a tribe that was being kicked off its land to make way for a safari park.”

Regarding arrest of Maasai in the “shooting incident”:

“When arrested (name withheld) had his knife and sticks taken from him. He was beaten on head and legs with blunt instruments. Starved for four days until his wife and children came from Irmasigil village to Loliondo to give him food. Sour milk mostly.

“Elder (name withheld):
Held for four days in police station before moving to the cells. For the days he was held in the station he was not given any food by police.

“It is also the belief of the Maasai that the government want to end the nomadic existence of the Maasai.”
“This is also seeming more likely with [Redacted] creating havoc in the North pushing the people in from Irmasiling, Sukanya, Euadooshooke and Mondorosi area with the help of the Tanzanian police whether they are just corrupt police in this area acting with the governments approval is in question.”

5. Pdnonline: Photo District News June 27, 2008 by Daryl Lang
Headline: Who Murdered Trent Keegan

“In a loosely written e-mail to his friend Gallagher, who works at the Irish newspaper Sunday World, Keegan wrote that ‘herdsmen and women were being arrested or beaten, and “one has been shot’.

“In another e-mail to a friend, he wrote, ‘There have been other deaths also that I don’t think they know who did these but are sure it’s the police acting on behalf of the safari company.”

“In his e-mail to Gallagher, Keegan wrote about the incident: ‘Bloody police came yesterday with a security guard from the safari company in question to question me about what I am doing here. Told them I’m a tourist and pretty much to mind their own bloody business.”

6. African Farmer’s Journal: June 5, 2008: an email from Brian McCormaic to Maanda noting that he has sent his “an African farmer’s journal” to his friends and people he worked within Ireland. (It is our understanding that this email was well circulated in the Arusha area.)

“Trent was working on a very important story before he was killed, trying to expose the exploitation of the Maasai people of Tanzania and Kenya by major tourism and safari companies, and in particular the alleged harassment of local Maasai herdsmen in the Loliondo, Sukenya, and Soit Sambu region of Tanzania (near Ngorongoro Crater) by security [redacted].

“One man, who Trent had interviewed and photographed in hospital, was allegedly shot by [redacted] and there are many allegations that local people have been terrorized by the same guards.”

7. From GalwayFirst News: by Caitlin O’Hanlon July 8, 2008
Title: Photographers final snaps emerge

“Many, including Mr. Keegan’s family believe that he may have been killed because of a story he was working on about Maasai tribes in Tanzania being forced off their lands by an American safari company.”

None of the accusations that you have read above are true. The District Commissioner was involved with the then RC when a neighbor falsely accused our team of burning bomas on our land in early 2007. The DC has stated that he was there with the RC and can remember how unhappy they were with these lies. We have a title deed to this property through a bidding process that took place in 2006 when Tanzanian Breweries Ltd placed advertisements in the Daily News offering the property for sale. As a Maasai with a veterinary degree, our anti-poaching team are all members of the surrounding villages, and none of our team carry firearms.

Although there have been implications that Trent’s death was linked to his stories on Tanzania, the Kenyan Police have arrested 5 people in connection with Trent’s death and recovered his missing cameras and computer equipment.

We would like to humbly request that you help us in clearing our name. As investors and as friends of Tanzania, we are dedicated to our continued support of Tanzania but feel that the false accusations about will lead to a loss of business. Current guests have called us asking if Tanzania is a safe place and if this is how we treat indigenous cultures. Potential tourists may seek another company or another country feeling that it is too dangerous to travel in Tanzania.

The District Commissioner has suggested that he would hold a press conference in Arusha as soon as possible but would await your approval. The independent voice of a government official at a press conference would help clear our name and set the record straight about as well as the safety of traveling to Tanzania.

Sincerely,

cc.
Dear All,

and I were able to meet up with 7 of the Village council on Saturday afternoon and we had some mbuzi nyama choma, asked questions and listened carefully to their perspective on things. It was an enjoyable and friendly meeting; as, says, they have done their own ‘fact finding’ through the DC’s office and elsewhere and no longer feel that it’s appropriate to start raking up the dirt on TBL in the past. (And just for the record, please be reassured that nobody at all, not even Maanda, suggests that as secured the land illegally – it is the old “case” against TBL that they mean.)

In the meeting were:

They were very pleased that we had taken the time to visit them in person and certainly feel that the best way of moving forward is through dialogue directly between the Village Council and the owners of the company. They don’t feel the need for any other kind of mediation in this regard. They feel perfectly amenable towards us as a company and feel that we can reach agreement easily without interference. This was music to our ears …

They also assured me that my team in Loliondo have not behaved badly in any way and that the malicious rumours disseminated about beatings, arrests, rapes and extortion on behalf of were not true. (We knew that anyway, but I wanted to make sure they felt that we were genuinely concerned to get to the bottom of any irresponsible behaviour by our crew. I even asked them openly whether they were happy with management there and they assured me they have no problem with him whatsoever.)

Thus, cutting directly to the chase, the two main issues for the village were that they felt:

1) We should ‘punguza’ (reduce) some land in several places and give it back to the Village.
2) We should stop talking about benefits to the Village and start implementing some projects without delay.

My first enquiry regarding point one was that I would like the Village to go back to the Village Council and consider exactly what they mean with this request. If they truly have land scarcity and grazing issues, I suggested that this would perhaps be better approached by reaching some agreement on controlled grazing. I explained that it was very difficult to discuss returning land that has already been paid for. They were sympathetic to this concept. I think it would be great if we could get as much scientific info as possible about the benefits of allowing some controlled grazing to make us better able to consider this request when you meet with the full Village Council during your forthcoming visit.

Regarding point two, the Village felt strongly that if we had pulled our fingers out a bit sooner on investing in local development projects, such as the water/windmill project, Maanda would not have been able to attack us and foster bad feeling against us. As I understood them, (and remember I was doing this in Swahili with occasional assistance from and - who will correct me if I misrepresent anything here, I hope), their main point was that ‘actions speak louder than words’ and they would like to see some action to be able to have some faith in as a useful entity within the community. The Village leaders feel that it would be a lot easier to defend our presence if they had something tangible to show the villagers about the positive benefits of us owning the land. However, be warned, that I think their expectations in this regard will be high – especially having just secured this annual donation of Tsh 50m from OBC. Anything that we do will no doubt be measured against this value in some way or another.

So there you go, open and shut case – except that we do need to make sure that the full Village Council is called together to discuss these conversations (this week) and to make sure that there is at least majority agreement. I did dig very deeply to enquire whether there was any dissent amongst the other council members and they did concede that it was very difficult to ever get 100% consensus on the issue (or any issue) and that the important point was that the democratic process has to be upheld with majority rule. This seems perfectly reasonable and correct to me.

From there we were able to have a long discussion about Maanda where I requested that the Village actually take action to deal with her rather than us. I pointed out that ignoring her was becoming difficult with the physical threats posed against my staff in confrontations and the unsavoury media campaign against us reaching international audiences. They accepted that they would take action against her if she torments us further, especially as I mentioned that it was very difficult for me to consider investing heavily or bringing more clients while the physical threats and the claims of serious “conflict” with the Village are persistently leveled against us. They did assure me that the Village committee would deal with any further transgressions by people from Maanda’s boma – and we came up with the idea of buying 4 simple mobile phones for 4 elders of the committee so that they will be able to call them to attend any future invasions (none of them have phones).

I certainly came away from that meeting very happy with the level of open communication that we had achieved and that we had very much broken the ice. My mission was to listen and ask questions rather than to try bending the villagers to our will in any way (much as I deal with Robanda). I think we need to make sure these people feel valued and respected and that some regular ‘utawalla’ visits wouldn’t be such a bad thing to keep the lines of communication open and clear at all times. It is most important that we are able to set a suitable date for a meeting with the Village council with and . They rather enjoyed the nyama choma, sodas and beers in our mess tent at the camp and it was certainly a very pleasant and private atmosphere to discuss the issues. We might perhaps think of setting up a special pow-wow camp like this for and a meeting with the Village. Please let us know which date you’re thinking of as I feel it’s important to give the members plenty of notice. My main concern is that the Village Council members of Maanda’s boma seem to not attend meetings and then claim they never happened. I would like to make sure we formally and publicly invite each and every member of the committee to the next meeting. If they choose to boycott that meeting then they will simply be denying their own voices in the democratic process and that will be up to them.

Let us know the date and if you’d like us to set up a special camp. I suppose other options might be over there at the Wasso hospital guest house for a more neutral location. please let us know what you think would be most appropriate.

I informed of the progress of the meeting and that the villagers felt no pressing need for a fact finding mission as they don’t really recognize a conflict. He said that 7 members wasn’t enough to decide on this and that we must obey protocols and procedures; I pointed out that I had never had any intention of conducting a 25-member VC meeting this weekend, whilst setting up camp and expecting 45 clients arriving Sunday, and that this was simply an informal chat. I also explained that these councilors seemed most adamant that they were representing the voice of the majority and I had no reason to disbelieve them. I expressed my own amusement that the NGO-luvvies in Arusha seemed most willing to abandon all protocols and pursue one person’s claim of conflict, but when 7 elected members of the VC including chairman and 2 sub-village chairman say there is no conflict they are unwilling to accept that it might just be true!

Whatever the case, I do think it is great that you will come and speak directly to the VC and that it is very much needed in order to dispel the rumours and make sure that everyone is on board. Maanda told me here in the office (many months ago) that and are corrupt and not representative of the majority view. (And I told her that that was the Village’s problem, not mine and that the villagers should seek to make sure suitable representatives get elected next time to pursue their concerns. This was not something in which should or should assist or interfere). So I think only be meeting all 25 members “ana kwa ana” can we be really sure where we stand and how to move forward. I’m 99.9% confident that we’re home and dry, but it’s important to involve everybody in the discussion at this stage.

I actually think you’ll enjoy getting to know your new neighbours in just the same way as we have come to know and love some of the characters of Robanda over the years. After that, it will all be as easy as butter sliding off a hot knife ...

Hope this email leaves everyone feeling more heartened …. as well as fantastical news about cheetah and wild dogs. :o)

Warm regards,
Dear [Name]

I totally agree with you on this, I recently had a meeting with the village chairman and told him about the fact finding mission, fortunately enough he was in Arusha at the same time when I was there for the meeting.

First of all he was surprised as to why we want to come together with Maanda. He kind of getting an impression that we are undermining the village administration for dealing with Maanda to solve our problems, I assured him that it was not that way. He told me that the village is fully aware that the land was legally given to TBL and that [redacted] legally purchased the land from the TBL.

He said that if there are problems, it is from people with personal interest like Maanda, and he believe that if Maanda shut off her mouth, then there will be fewer problem in the area. This is the reason why he told me to call police in that incidence when people from Maanda area came to the farm with all sorts of weapons to attack us.

He also believe with some other people in the community whom have problems, it is only quite normal that not everybody will agree for the same thing at the same time, it always take time for people to understand things, I am sure this is also true for a learned community, leave alone for the Maasai whom they only think of grazing all the time.

I have been here for 10 months now, and what I have noticed that there is a big change on perception on the community side, more people want to have benefits from the investment in the area at the moment, for example I told you that the Sukenya subvillage people said at the village general meeting, that they don't want to follow up on the land any more, they will neither go to court nor to the President on the land issue, all they want now are benefits and support from the company, I am sure slowly but surely everybody will come to that at the end of the day.
Alot of people have not trust with Maanda at the moment, they all know that she has her own personal agenda.

The Village chairman think that we should just ignore her completely, everybody here says that she is very strong, but for how long will she be strong when she is lying? I think people gain strength because they talk nothing but truth and reality but not her.

The fact that she has been threatening to bad mouth the company in local and international media, is all non sense, if she does that, then it should probably be dealt in a different way without involving the community.

Maanda and Makko are just couples, what they talk should not be taken as coming from the community, Makko comes from Arash, some 80 KM away from Sukunya, everyone at soit sambu village wonder as to why is he involved with the farm issues, he is just at soit sambu because he works with CRT which is based there and he has nothing to do with the village land.

He is not a Soit sambu village government representative as he identified himself at the last meeting we had in Arusha.

I totally agree that if anyone or a group of people still want to find the facts about the farm, then they should do on their own. At this moment lets us just focus on getting a good relationship with the whole community and not one person with a personal hidden agenda.

Thanks again and will talk to you soon.

Kind regards,

Dear All,

I wanted to speak for myself as one individual trying to ascertain if we would like to continue working with TNRF to provide the "environment" where all parties can come together to work together. The below feelings are unrelated to my agreement that TSTZ needs to work on a positive PR campaign. This is perhaps where [redacted] comes in.

To date, we have had many conversations with [redacted] which unfortunately were cut short endlessly due to his phone problems. I believe that [redacted] would truly be a good person to bring people together, but I feel that he would like to do what he does best... bring people together... and he might be finding a reason to bring people together when in fact it is not needed yet.

I agree that it would be best if we had some facts that we could all agree to. But what seemed important after much questioning was that [redacted] thought that the perception of the legality of our ownership of the land was at the root of all conflict. If that is true, then bringing Maanda, a group from Kenya, the [redacted] NGO's etc. to a gathering (to bring people together) will not get to the root of the ownership of the property. This is a government conflict with some of the people.

We need to have a plan. We need to collect all documents that show that we have legally and rightfully purchased a lien free piece of land. If others feel that the government sold that land illegally, then those "others" should begin fighting the government.

The [redacted] is deeply entrenched in the idea of pastoralist rights and I think they should continue their fight but without us. I believe that [redacted] retort is a good one. That we are caught in between pastoralists and the government and have done nothing wrong but to be in a bad place at a bad time.

Perhaps we need to come together to suggest that if this is the issue that we suggest that they begin their battle with the government. In the meantime, we need to continue a positive campaign about the benefits of having [redacted] in Loliondo.

My point is that I do not believe we can come together to resolve something that is at a government level. We will just all sit down and agree to disagree... and then what? Maanda has an agenda and I am not understanding how coming together is going to resolve any conflict.

I am still disheartened but feel that maybe this is the feeling I will continue to have as we just go about doing our business. In the end we will have great support from the community if we put our efforts where our mouth is. Build wells, schools, continue to ask the village how we can be of any help, be good neighbors and share our vision with them.

We also need to be on the same page. I do not believe in offering our neighbors a bednight fee. I would prefer to tell them that we are collecting a conservation fee from every guest and will work with the community on how we will together spend this money.

Dear [Name],

Thank you for your correspondence dated 13/08/2010. Thank you for also inviting an African Initiatives representative to join you on a water survey. My apologies for not replying to you sooner; I was out of the office for most of August, in part visiting partners and communities in Tanzania. I am only now catching up on correspondence. I would be interested to hear about the results of the water survey, if indeed it took place, and the proposed course of action.

However, access to water is only one concern, and indeed, not the main issue. The Maasai want their land back and have opened court cases against [Name] in order to regain control of their land. Solt-Sambu Village Council must feel they have a good legal case or they would not waste their time or money. African Initiatives will therefore continue to support their efforts in seeking justice.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Rosie,

I hope that you are enjoying your summer. I wanted to respond to you again as there have been some new developments of which I believe you should be aware. I do thank you for your previous letter, and, again, appreciate your commitment to social justice and the people of Tanzania. I also respect the fact that you have traveled to Loliondo and conducted interviews.

That being said, we remain firm in the assertions we made in our first letter. We still believe you are being misinformed. We call for any investigations to be made by professionals who are not biased and who, if possible, speak Maa and Swahili as first and second languages. Or if they require the services of a translator, that individual should be a professional without any bias or ties to the case whatsoever. I myself hear a considerable amount of hearsay and stories about the organization you support from people in the communities of Mondorosi and Sukunya. I will not fully believe any of them until there is definitive evidence to back them up. If you have any genuine facts and evidence to corroborate your reports and would be willing to share them with us, I would be happy to follow up on them and take any action required.

In other news, I am happy to report that some of our representatives recently had a series of meetings in Mondorosi and they went extremely well. I received official minutes from a meeting at Mondorosi School, and, while there is much discussion, many village officials, teachers, and parents did ask to work with [Name] on several projects.

Furthermore, I have been corresponding with Maanda recently, and I hope we are on the road to finding common ground. Perhaps Maanda has forwarded you some of the emails, as I understand that she has done so to other PWC supporters.
Maanda has made a request for cattle to access water in the Pololet in Enashiva. I do question the accuracy of many of her claims and accounts in the email. The request is rather perplexing because the Pololet is not a permanent water source and is usually completely dry in the dry season. That being said, I am completely open to having an official tour and survey of water sources both in and around Enashiva. We have invited a PWC member to join the tour and it will be accompanied by officials from village and district offices so that it is transparent. Let us get to the bottom of it.

I think it is important to notify African Initiatives, and include the recent correspondence, because, in your materials, you have claimed that Thomson recently blocked communities to access two water sources. This simply is not true. The other water source, Lotimi, mentioned in Maanda’s correspondence is on the border of Enashiva and communities always access water there. It is just a small seep, so does not provide much, especially in the dry season. It is the only source in or beside Enashiva that has at least a bit of water almost year round.

Anyway, if you do have someone from African Initiatives visiting now, it is important that they join this survey, just as I hope PWC sends someone.

Please let me know.

Sincerely,

[Redacted]

Dear Maanda,

Not sure you had a chance to read my previous email. I didn’t see a response from you but perhaps you are traveling again.

I am cc’ing Carrell on my emails since I believe she is truly committed to helping to find a win-win resolution to any misunderstandings that might have arisen between PWC and [Redacted] in the past.

I am writing to you because I continue to get conflicting information and truly want to try to work with you and the community of Mondorosi. First, I hope that you will join a tour and water survey of the Pololet and other sources. I have visited Enashiva during the dry season and we have had water experts in the area in the past. The Pololet is almost always completely dry in the dry season. But let us have the officials and others on the water survey look at the situation.

I have received other information that confuses me and conflicts with yours. For example, the District Water Council claimed not to know of any plans to repair the water pump and generator at Mondorosi. It is not in their budget and they have not been working with any organization to resolve the issue. Yet you write, "The District council water department, PWC and the community have taken immediate action to fix it soon as we can." With no water in the Pololet, it seems like fixing the water pump would be a quick short-term fix to the current water issues in Mondorosi and it would benefit the community as a whole — both families and cattle — far more than just 500 cows. It could also open up a dialogue about how to establish other long-term sustainable projects.

Similarly, you wrote, "The community at Mondorosi thinks that after meeting this Friday that refused to accept [Redacted] money for the school led to a decision to denied access to water." I wanted to find out more about this meeting but now have been told that there was an official meeting held at Mondorosi Primary School recently (not on Friday) and it was attended by the chairmen of the Mondorosi and Enado Ooshoke, council members, district officials, teachers, parents, traditional leaders, and many others. I have received a copy of the meeting minutes, including all of those in attendance. There was a lot of positive debate and discussion, and ultimately communities and leaders asked to collaborate with [Redacted] on various projects.
Anyway, I look forward to your response so that I can get a better understanding of these conflicting reports. I am not trying to twist your words, Maanda, I am reporting what officials have given to me.

Dear [blank],

I was away and now back, I want to clarify my last email to you and my position. I am afraid that you have not understood me or twisted the meaning of my words.

First I’m not representing any village, I wrote you an email as a resident of both Mondorosi and Irmasiling.

On Sunday I received over 10 phone calls from Irmasiling and Modondorosi explain how over 500 cows were denied access to water. I was very upset to hear that livestock were being denied access to the oltimi water source and the pollelet river on the disputed property. This is why I decided to talk to you strait away. This was not a request from any village and please do not think that it was.

The purpose of my email was to inform you of the situation to make sure you were aware what was happening and that maasai communities were losing access to important waters sources on the disputed property bought by thomons. I was not requesting your assistance to fix the mondorosi water pump.

The District council water department, PWC and the community have taken immediate action to fix it soon as we can. We totally did not ask [blank] to help. What we want from you is to allow access to natural streams allocated in the disputed property but not to help in the repair. I think you do not understand the difference between helping someone by giving some small temporary money or their need for access to grazing land and water for their families livelihoods for generations and generations. This is why the community of mondorosi decided not to take your money for the school, saying they cannot trade this money for their land.

The cows belong to Mondorosi community and Irmasiling. The village chairman tried to reach Daniel but was not reachable, but he spoke to Lengume one of the [blank] overseeing the same. Yes the district council is aware of the need. It is one of they are responsibility to fix with the community.

About your statement of my meeting with [blank], few weeks ago I was on the way to Loliondo market, [blank] saw me and approached and I promised him that we should meet and discuss the problem. In fact I told him my interest is only to see people getting some lands back. Since I was on rush we planned to meet sometimes. But did not discuss or decide on anything. The meet as like 5 minutes words exchange.

I am not a gate keeper between the community and [blank] but as a member of the village, and as the coordinator of PWC and as a district councilor, I’m ready to be among those who can facilitate a transparent and open dialogue. For this to happen it is important that you meet with the community from the three sections surrounding the disputed property.

Again I think [blank] should discuss with the official Soitsambu village government as they have been requesting for years.
The village council of soit-sambu told us invites owners to discuss the possibility of solving this problem. This is what everybody is waiting for. And really advice that you personally as an owner should get involved if you want this problem to be over. As I have always told you.

I’m very sorry but I think my request is not enough to think that we are intending to collaborate for the same thing. The betterment of Maasai community is only possible if they get back they are land.

Since you wrote on your website that we are all working together PWC is in the process to finalize an official statement on what you have been writing on the internet on the relationship between us and you that has never existed.

Best wishes
Maanda

Dear Maanda,

I am very pleased to hear from you, although it does not come without sadness to learn about the ongoing water problems in Mondorosi and throughout Loliondo. I have heard that, like a small gift from God, it rained over this past weekend. Let us hope that will offer some respite for many pastoralists in the area, and let us pray there is more to come soon.

I thank you, the leader of an influential NGO, for taking the initiative to reach out to me. I want to address your concerns as soon as possible, but first I have a few questions. Are you making this request on behalf of the new Mondorosi Village? Or the current interim Soit Sambu Village? Is Ngorongoro District aware of these needs? Whose 500 cows are you speaking about?

I read your Sunday message this Monday morning, July 26. I have already informed [redacted] and will be following up with all staff, as I need more information from them as well before I can officially respond to any of your comments at length.

You also mentioned that the water pump is not working in Mondorosi. Please let me know what is required in order to repair this pump. [redacted] is interested in helping. We can do this immediately.

I understand that you recently had a cordial conversation with [redacted]. I interpret this, as well as you reaching out to me, as a very encouraging sign that we are on the road to having collaborate with PWC and CRT for the betterment of Maasai communities throughout Loliondo.

Dear [REDACTED],

We have a big problem here, Mondorosi community are very disparate of water problems. We are in the process to fix a water pump. They have been using Pololet River of the last 4 months. Yesterday your guards turn overt 500 livestock preventing them from Pololet water source. And telling them never to come and drink water or even to across the disputed property. I’m writing this email to ask you if you could make an official statement to you staff here to allow the community surroundings the disputed property to use the pololet water and Elotim water.

The village chairman is trying to conduct and I’m told to find and DC over the same. It is an urgent situation we know you have offered to help for development this is the most desperate help we need. We do not know if this decision to denied access to water again is made by you or somebody else. The community at Mondorosi thinks that after meeting this Friday that refused to accept money for the school led to decision to denied access to water. As since January 2010, we have seen improvement in allowing the community access to water and grazing, and are shocked by the current change in situation.

We know we are in the middle of the conflict over this property, but please do not harm so many people at this critical stage of drought. Here my mobile phone in case you want to talk to me. + 255 785481165.

Looking forward to your quick feedback.

No problem, Lucy.

We received a preliminary summary of the government report and some of its findings. Please note the number of ministries involved in this investigation. It has been available on the website we created to answer questions about Enashiva:

[2010/02/23/investigative-report-summary]

One of the sources of conflict is clan tension, including the widely recognized marginalization of the people of Sukanya who historically and traditionally were associated with this land, and who support us. Besides clan tension, you should also note the following as a source of conflict:

iv) Pressure from photographic Tourist Companies and NGOs that already had agreements with certain people of the village of Soit Sambu and their own personal interests and benefits concerning the land before it was sold to the investor.

The committee discovered that tourist companies had already been camping (illegally) on the Sukanya Farm while it was still owned by TBL, and that they were paying local NGOs and individuals in Soit Sambu to do so.

We believe that this is at the root of the rumors and allegations against us. We also believe that as those initial rumors took hold, a greater opportunity presented itself to these same people. By demonizing us in the co-opted name of indigenous rights they could not only bring wide media attention to themselves and to what we acknowledge is a globally relevant issue, but they could vastly increase funding for themselves and for their NGOs.

As part of our efforts to obtain the government report, investigative committee members revealed to us that several individuals who made allegations against [redacted] could neither verify their stories with evidence, nor provide the most basic of details. Of course, this was provided to us verbally, but it is yet another reason why we feel so compelled to request that intense investigation of sources be required.

[redacted] come from the communities in Loliondo. Many of them have grown up with our direct neighbors and know them by name. Others are friends and relatives. But, for the most part, allegations are only presented to donors and the media. As you know, there is a traditional means of resolving conflicts in Maasai culture involving elders and traditional leaders. Concerning allegations against elders and traditional leaders have never been asked to intervene or advise. Why? Fact checking needs to be done.

Concerning the Regional Commissioner, we are trying to recall if the incident was published in the Arasha Times or not. Another option would be to contact the current Regional Commissioner’s office to see if they have documentation. Upon request, we might be able connect you with their office. Let me know.

Indigenous rights are indeed an important issue to uphold. We fervently believe that there is a way forward and a win-win situation for all clans and communities and stakeholders is possible. We have not given up this critical journey, and we continue to plead for honest debate and conversation, rather than incendiary rhetoric that only creates hostility. Despite the persistence of misinformation and fabrications, we see a future filled with extraordinary potential and welcome any suggestion by Minority Rights has to offer.

I will be out of the office for the next couple weeks and only checking email periodically, but I do look forward to moving our correspondence ahead.

Sincerely,
Thank you. I'd be interested to read the government report if it is released publicly - were you ever sent a copy? And were the Regional Commissioner's findings ever reported in writing, or purely verbally?

Kind regards

Lucy

Lucy,

It is heartening to know that Minority Rights views capacity-building for conflict resolution as a critical part of its mission.

Resolution is at the heart of our vision for moving hand in hand with all Maasai communities and all clans to transform Enashiva into an outstanding model for conservation, natural resource management, and ecotourism. While there are a number of community leaders, women’s groups, and community conservation experts involved in the current process, we welcome other stakeholders, both local and international, if they share that same commitment to resolution.

We appreciate your interest in the government report and the details of the Regional Commissioner’s findings. The government report has not been released publically, but we hope that after this election season it may be. As far as the Regional Commissioner, it was actually the then-Regional Commissioner, Abbas Kondoro (not Isidore Shirima, the current RC, as I mistakenly mentioned in my last email) who flew to Loliondo based on a complaint by Maanda Ngoitiko that we had burned families out of their bomas. He found that nothing but some abandoned fencing had been burned and publically reprimanded her for her false claims that provoked fear and hostility.

As you know, despite our 30-year history of ethical behavior in Tanzania, we have been placed under the most intense scrutiny since purchased the land. We have been able to disprove many false claims, and cast doubt on many others. In the meantime, our opposition has never been scrutinized. I don’t say this as a provocation, but as a sincere suggestion that you hold your source accountable. When the accuser receives significant funding from multiple NGOs, and has well-known political objectives, it seems reasonable to question motives. It is an honorable thing when NGO’s band together, but we hope that your organization does not lose sight of its responsibility to seek the truth. It would be an unfortunate precedent if each NGO legitimized the involvement of the other, without each one performing its due diligence and vetting its shared source.

While a number of these challenges play themselves out in the background and changes transpire with local governments, there is a process being put in place at to ensure that all communities have a stake of the management of their natural resources under clearer terms and that communities can benefit from conservation and tourism on a larger scale. We will be happy to inform you about this process as it continues to develop.

In the meantime, it is important for you to know about some other positive things that are happening. Right now, there is a strong grassroots movement that is gaining momentum around not only amongst the Loita and Laitayok who largely support us, but members of the Purko. For example, four different women’s groups from three different villages and clans have begun to meet, uniting and creating ways to better engage in and benefit from community conservation, natural resource management, and tourism. They are empowering themselves, and we are very proud to play a small role in facilitating that.

I look forward to hearing from you again.

Sincerely,

Dear [Redacted]

Thanks for your email, and apologies for the delay in replying. I am out of the office frequently at present. I hope your travels went well.

As you may already be aware from our meeting with [Redacted], MRG has long worked with a number of pastoralist organisations in East Africa. This has included researching and writing about conflicts between communities and with majority populations, supporting conflict resolution mechanisms, researching and writing about pastoralist community involvement in development, researching and writing about gender issues, conducting training on research methodologies, advocacy (both nationally and internationally) and media skills, as well as supporting legal claims relating to international human rights law. We visited Loliondo in order to explore how best we can deepen our collaboration and support for PWC, an organisation we have great respect for. That support includes finding a resolution to the current land dispute at Sukenya - and, as I said, we are open to suggestions as to how best to proceed with this.

I hope that clarifies issues and I look forward to a constructive dialogue on the issues.

Kind regards
Lucy

Lucy,

Thank you for your response and for your openness to beginning a more in-depth dialogue concerning our relationship with communities around will be more than happy to provide you with more information and materials and to discuss some thoughts on resolutions.

I am traveling today and will write back to you in the near future, but first could you tell me a bit more about what role Minority Rights Group International sees itself playing concerning this issue? I have heard that you are investigating these issues to try and determine whether or not Minority Rights Group wants to provide funding to individuals behind a court case against TBL and [redacted].

Is that accurate? Or how would you describe your objectives?

Just want to have a clear understanding of your role as this dialogue progresses. I will be in touch next week.

Thank you again for your response.

Dear [redacted],

Thank you for your email. I should first explain that your original email dated 22 September was sent to MRG’s general email address and was not specifically addressed to me, and therefore has only come to my attention as a result of your email of 13 October, hence the lack of response.

It was helpful to meet with [redacted] during our visit, to aid MRG’s understanding of the Sukanya Farm conflict. I was also most interested to hear that [redacted] does wish to resolve the issues and it is encouraging that you have also raised this with me. During our meeting, [redacted] mentioned that [redacted] was investigating suitable avenues/bodies for conflict resolution, and I would be keen to hear from you should you have any suggestions.

You mention below that "accusations about displacement were investigated and found to be untrue by the Arusha Regional Commissioner, Isidore Shirima. Additionally, a 10-month investigation was led by the Office of the Prime Minister and drew the same conclusion." I have been unable to locate a copy of the findings of either investigation, yet they are important in further aiding MRG’s understanding of the situation. Would you be able to provide me with a copy of the these?

Regards

Lucy Claridge,

Greetings. We have not received a response from our letter dated September 22, 2010, however, we understand that you have since traveled to Loliondo, and, among many other meetings, you met with [name] the general manager and a Maasai woman from Loliondo who has worked with some women’s groups around.

We will wait to hear from you so that we might respond to your specific concerns and comments in greater depth. Based on reports from our general manager, however, we feel it to be imperative that we again reach out to you in the spirit conflict resolution, as suggested during your discussion.

Had you informed us of your short visit to Loliondo, we would have been delighted to assist in any way possible and could have given you a full tour of [name] and introduced you to Maasai leaders who have been at the very heart of the vision for [name] to become an outstanding model for community empowerment, wildlife conservation, and ecotourism. We are pleased to hear that you did actually meet with the people of Sukenya. No other similar organization has done so.

It should be noted that countless allegations have primarily been reported only to donors looking to fund the Tanzanian NGOs in question and to members of the media during trips facilitated by these very same NGOs. As you know, there are traditional means of resolving conflicts in Maasai communities, involving traditional leaders and elders. However, the so-called "victims," as they were described to you by the NGOs, have not once sought either traditional or legal means to seek justice concerning such allegations. This obviously raises some questions.

Furthermore, the community wildlife scouts grew up in the communities around [name]. Most community members know them by name. However, names and details are never included when the NGOs in question make allegations against [name]. If you would provide us with a date, detailed description of an accusation, and the name of a staff member allegedly involved, we could immediately investigate internally and take any necessary actions if they are found to be true.

We look forward to corresponding with your organization and to offering us your thoughts and concerns.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern:

Greetings. We wanted to open up a dialogue with your organization, as we have heard from a journalist and from other sources that you have taken interest in issues concerning the believes that there is a significant amount of misinformation and fabrications that have been circulated about community conservation projects at so we have been proactive in reaching out to several organizations internationally. Listening to, collaborating with, and learning from the communities around remains our top priority. However, we also know that there is a lot to learn from numerous organizations throughout the world and we remain completely open to discussing some of these issues and providing information. In fact, some well-known lecturers in the UK, who focus on responsible tourism, have been very helpful in guiding some discussions with us.

As an introduction, purchased the Sukenya Farm from Tanzania Breweries Limited (TBL) in a legal, transparent bidding process in 2006. The owners quickly saw how the Sukenya Farm could be a model for community empowerment, wildlife conservation, and ecotourism. The directors of met with numerous traditional leaders, village leaders, and other stakeholders to seek guidance on the best way forward.

At the time of sale, there were no Tanzanians living on the farm whatsoever, and accusations about displacement were investigated and found to be untrue by the Arusha Regional Commissioner, Isidore Shirima. Additionally, a 10-month investigation was led by the Office of the Prime Minister and drew the same conclusion. There have been some groups that have been opposed to this sale from the beginning and have led a three-year campaign of spreading misinformation and fabrications about and community conservation initiatives at the

. Some of these groups have connections to at least one other foreign tourist company and, we believe, individuals have benefited significantly financially from their campaign.

has vehemently denied these allegations as they have arisen, and it has also conducted its own exhaustive internal investigations. Furthermore, it has regularly sought means to resolve these issues directly with the groups involved using third parities as objective intermediaries. However, these groups have not shown interest in finding such a resolution and have continued to circulate baseless allegations without any primary sources or corroborating concrete evidence.

It should be noted that there are different Maasai clans that live around the Laitiyok, Purko, and Loita - in three separate communities and there has been a longstanding tension among these clans over lands in the area. For example, the Sukunya farm had been the ancestral lands of the Laitiyok clan, whose members continue to dominate the population of Sukunya Village. Sukunya has only been recognized this year as an independent village (as opposed to its previous status of sub-village). This has resulted in jubilation by the village because its people have been marginalized for decades due to clan differences and longstanding tensions.

"Tanzania received its independence in 1961, but we, the people of Sukunya, have not been free since that time," said the Sukunya sub-village chairman, Loserian Minis. "After almost 50 years now, we finally have our freedom."

Has been falsely accused of not working with communities. We actually have a very strong relationship with Sukunya Village, among other, and have worked extensively with village leaders, elders, women's groups, and others on various community, conservation, and ecotourism initiatives. has also worked with other communities and all the Maasai clans involved. Members of each of the three clans are represented on a board of community wildlife scouts. Furthermore, controlled grazing and water access are issues that are negotiated on a regular basis with communities, as proven by witness testimony, and video testimony of herders who have actually thanked for its assistance in grazing.

The voices of all these supporters have not been heard, and they should be. Instead, they have been drowned out by those who have the resources and political savvy to go to the media and the internet. Specifically, it is a small, vocal group of people who are heavily involved in the nearly 40 NGO's that exist in Loliondo, one of the most poverty-stricken parts of Tanzania. There are compelling reports of certain NGO's misleading their supporters, by claiming to have constructed classrooms and homes that in reality do not exist.

We categorically deny the false accusations that have been lodged against us. We enthusiastically welcome the advice and wisdom of legitimate organizations. We also welcome any questions from those who wish to find out more.

As individuals and investors, we have been in Tanzania for 30 years and have an outstanding record of doing philanthropic works throughout the country and working closely with indigenous communities. Please see just a few examples attached. Despite early challenges, we are confident that this matter can be resolved and that the can be an exceptional model for community conservation.

Sincerely,
Tanzania
Thank you and all.

Note that I spoke with a bit more about my past discussions with and the idea of seeing if the nascent Soit Sambu Village, under his leadership, could write a letter stating that they want absolutely nothing to do with the appeal. He will need to tread carefully.

As far as the TOR, I took a shot at putting something on paper, anyway. See attached.

Perhaps suggest other objectives of more immediate priority that can also be added.

Believe Sukenya should be having a meeting tomorrow. Any news on security issues?

Best,

Hi

Just to also put my thoughts on the same page..and to agree with you all on keeping a mindful pace on this.

Keep up the good work on thinking this trust thing though..and on challenging us to work on and figure it all out.

When it comes to practice on the ground everything is a bit fragile and resettling into a new mode of management..

The interim body advised involving the community sooner rather than later. That was unanimous advice from and However, the business of doing that, talking trusts and grazing committee with the community, has backfired in that over two thousand head of livestock are on the farm within days of your discussions with them and remains still an unresolved problem today.

We still need to learn why this happened, resolve it and work out how to modify our approach going forwards.

He is just starting his new job and with all that demands, we need to be careful not to overload his willingness and capacity on how much input, complexity and balls he can keep in the air..

By all means, keep up the comms with... and coordination with... bearing in mind the above.

I am out of the office till Tuesday afternoon so feel free to call me any time..

I'll try and pull... and... together to look at this next week... and after developments this weekend.

All the best,

With you 100%, [Redacted] and I agreed upon the same thing. The village is having a meeting on Tuesday and the cattle issue is going to be addressed in their discussions and, with hope, resolved [Redacted] will be heading to [Redacted] by the end of next week.

It might be prudent to plan ahead, so we had discussed the possibility of pushing forward with trust efforts later in September if all goes well.

I had also planned on sending something first to you all so we could discuss and edit it.

Anyway, enjoy the long weekend as well.

Great to hear [Redacted] is doing well, [Redacted] I feel like we need to resolve the cattle issue fully and also learn more about the intentions of Soit before diving into talking with the community about this trust. Don't you? While [Redacted] may seem his old self, does it make sense to offer him this task so soon. If you do send something around this weekend, I suggest it is only to [Redacted] and me. We should see that before [Redacted]. We may need to comment or discuss.

Have a good long labor day weekend.

All,

I just spoke with [redacted]. He certainly is his own self again, full of energy, mirth, and laughter.

I debriefed him in greater depth about ongoing issues in Sukenya, Orkiu, Soit Sambu, and Mondorosi. He will also be meeting [redacted] later this weekend as he will be back in Arusha.

I am fully confident now that he can carry the flag and continue to do the groundwork in forming the trust and dealing with other diplomatic issues.

Should we not draw up a formal contract for him? Recall I wrote a job description for a new position and I have a draft of a terms of reference for a consultant. I could synthesize those documents and send something around this weekend.

I think I have other details, [redacted] from what you discussed with him.

My two cents worth:
Definitely get a letter from the Soit Sambu Village Council saying they have nothing to do with this appeal. They should know that we are going to ask for payment from the Soit Sambu Village Council for our costs... and if they want to be part of the old Council they need to know that we are serious. If they are a separate entity, they should make sure the government knows that now and what their stance is on this.

Sigh. Well, this is to be expected, sadly. Damn.

But this is not likely the Soit Sambu Village Council, per se, whether their name is on it or not, unless they have actual signature this time. I am sure the same small group characters are involved, including the former Soit Sambu Village Chair, [redacted] and some others, but all they have to do is co-opt the name, as always.

I suggest two measures:
* Mobilizing the nascent Soit Sambu Village Council. They could write a letter saying they want nothing to do with the appeal and it should not be allowed. This could be done via [redacted] and others.

* Getting a certificate of incorporation, or whatever it is called in Tanzania, from Sukenya Village, if it is now available.

I can make calls from here, but obviously need someone to put on some pressure on the ground and get it done. Don't know if [redacted] could do so in his short trips.

Any thoughts on this or past emails?

Hi [redacted]

OK the situation on this is that the Plaintiff (soit Sambu Village council) advised that it wanted to appeal. It filed the paperwork regarding that. We have seen that. However I then heard from [redacted] that they also filed with the court a request to be supplied with certified copies of proceedings, ruling and decree plus any other relevant documents, so they can properly prepare the appeal.

I have learned that in this situation the 60 day limit does not apply yet. We were all under the impression that they had 60 days to appeal or the appeal opportunity would be lost. However this 60 day limit does not kick in until the court has fullfilled their request for copies. Once the court delivers the copies, the 60 days start counting.

So this is the latest that I am aware of.

What ticks me off is that the Soit Sambu Village Council and its lawyer are carrying on with this. They have a nice school building to boot. At some point it would be nice for the council to decide where it lies in this process and if they want to carry on or not. If not, they should write a letter addressing their desire to back out and have the chairman etc of the council sign it. We can then proceed with a clear understanding of their intentions. Right now they are acting friendly to us but behind the scenes are proceeding, perhaps this is not the councils wish or understanding, a letter from them would clarify that.

Thanks [redacted]

Project Name:

Project Supervisor:

Locations:
Villages of Sukenya, Orkiu, and Mondorosi
Arusha

Funder:

Rate:
Negotiable

Overview: An interim committee is currently establishing a conservancy trust, a non-profit organization to oversee conservation, community, and other initiatives within the and among three communities surrounding the refuge. The consultant will first improve upon current relationships with communities, particularly in terms of uncontrolled grazing, and then seek to gradually engage communities to join in the process of forming a conservancy trust with the interim committee and the

Objectives:

1. Community Education & Grazing Control Reestabishment: This should be the absolute top priority and no other objectives need be pursued until this goal is achieved. Communities need to understand that we cannot move ahead on community projects or in establishing the organization if uncontrolled grazing continues.

Only once grazing is controlled can the consultant move on to the following objectives and continue to form the conservancy trust.
2. Mobilizing Sukenya Interim Committee Members: Three Sukenya leaders have been selected to serve on the interim committee. Once a return to respecting grazing rules is established, the consultant will meet with these representatives to determine how to best move ahead with the trust establishment.

3. Engaging Orkiu / Engusero Sambu to Join the Committee: Visit Orkiu, which technically is still part of Engusero Sambu, and engage them in the process of writing a letter to join the committee. Village and ward leaders have already expressed interest in writing a letter to the interim committee asking to join the trust and presenting their representative, whom they planned on selecting. Note that Orkiu/Engusero Sambu has been told that there is room for only one representative for now and they can only join if the interim committee, including new members from Sukenya, agrees to accept them.

Similarly, however, grazing rules must be respected by Orkiu / Engusero Sambu before this step can be taken.

4. Engaging Mondorosi Village: In August, the Mondorosi Village Council allegedly met and determined that it wanted to make amends with and meet with one of its representatives. First follow up on this and find out where the village stands now. It has been expressed to the village chairman that will request a letter of reconciliation from the village before moving ahead on any discussions whatsoever. This letter should explain why Mondorosi subvillage caused confusion among communities and clearly state that the village seeks reconciliation and cooperation with

If the letter is obtained, the consultant should make recommendations to his supervisor as to how to move ahead on relations with Mondorosi Village.

5. Inspiring Inter-Village Cooperation: Without the support and acceptance of inter-village cooperation, the entire process of trust formation is tenuous. In all meetings, the consultant should attempt to reinforce this objective. Specifically, Sukenya has noted that they are open to having other villages join the trust, however, they want to be the ones to first start the organization. It will be essential, however, to have other villages be on board long before the organization is ready to be registered it critical.
6. Organizing Key Meetings to Obtain Community Views on Trust Goals: The first five objectives culminate in the pursuit of organizing a series of key stakeholder meetings with the interim committee, including all members available and community representatives. During these meetings, the committee will agree upon a mission statement, a vision, and a set of objectives for the conservancy trust.

7. Various Other Project & Management Analysis: The consultant may be called upon to provide analysis and recommendations for various other projects and for management of [illegible].

Methods: The consultant will attempt to travel to [illegible] at least twice a month and regularly communicate with all stakeholders as needed throughout the month via phone and email.

Timeline: Since certain objectives need to be achieved before others can be pursued, it is difficult to place a strict timeline on the project. Ideally, interim committee meetings could resume being held in October and November, a time when the [illegible] could also potentially attend meetings whether held in Arusha or Enashiva.
Dear [Name],

Thank you so much for your email, it is really a pleasure to work with [Name], particularly this loliondo project, it is challenging, but I can see a good relationship with the community working out in the near future, I also say, thank you so much for giving me this opportunity to work here at loliondo.

With regard to the women project, I know them and I visited them first with Ina, and also, I have been taking [Name] to visit them whenever they come, so I can definitely make arrangement for the women group to make the necklaces for your friend, just let me know when and what exactly is needed and I will do it, this will not only benefit the women group but it will reinforce our relationship with the community.

Kind regards,

Hello [Name],

[Name] keeps copies me on all your emails. I wanted to take a moment to thank you for doing such a great job up at Loliondo. I have been very concerned about the cattle, Mama Maanda, the local community, the poachers...etc. But, you have put my mind at ease by working closely with our neighbors. Thank you.

I have a woman here in the U.S. who visits Tanzania 3 times a year. She hopes to have a Maasai village provide her necklaces, bracelets, and artwork that she can take home, sell, and give the proceeds to [Name]. You should know that we hope to finish our schools in Karatu and Robanda and then begin donating money to Loliondo Schools. This will not happen until we are finished the schools that I mentioned and that we know that the community supports our ownership of the land.

But, I am wondering if the collaborative group of women near the school, might be the perfect group to make this jewelry. If so, I may put you in touch with her. She is willing to provide the seed money to begin having women make these necklaces. Are you interested in helping? Perhaps you may want to pass some of the jewelry making to the women in the boma who are giving us grief...just to appease them and as a token of friendship.

Let me know your thoughts.

Subject: RE: Loliondo Issues

Dear [Redacted],

This is to let you know that, the meeting yesterday went very well, it was attended by the Soitsambu village chairman [Redacted], sukenya sub village chairman [Redacted], Ngorongoro District Police Officer, and the villagers.

The village chairman talked to the women who went to Loliondo that it was not good thing that they did, he told them that, in the future if they have any problem, then they should see their immediate leaders before going further, he told them that it was clear that they were influenced to do that by someone as they did not have any clear issue that they wanted to address.

The District Police officer told them that it is against the law to go into someone else property and he translated some Tanzanian law to them, he did this because he believed that a lot of people don't know what the law says and this is why they do things the way they do.

On their side they talked that they want to be allowed to bring in cattle to drink water, but we agreed that we will discuss this in the next meeting which we scheduled to be next Wednesday, Feb 13th. The District Commissioner will also attend that meeting.

I think with this we better allow them to bring cattle for water only, that means they go straight to water and after that they go back.

For grazing, I told them that we will only discuss that during the severe drought, right now it is raining heavily everywhere and that there is grasses everywhere so they don't need to ask for that now. we will have to consider that if there is not any grass around left.

I was at the District Commissioner's office the other day, and he told me that they too, are convinced that Maanda was involved in arranging for the women to riot, and he said when they get enough evidence, then they will call her to give a serious warning for that.

I think we don't have to worry about her threat to kill wildlife, we will be scanning every where and if we find that she killed animals then we report her to the authority and I am sure she won't be happy with that.

What I, have gathered recently is that, and Maanda's NGO, have a sort of partnership and their main goal is to acquire and own the land, I met a person from soitsambu who was working with in the past and he told me of this.

Well, had a wonderful time, I was able to be with them all the time despite of what have been happening here, I took them on the walks and they didn't even know that we had some shida around. I also don't talk to safari guests about cattle problem in the property, and actually it is not a big problem as it is only caused by one boma in the whole neighborhood, and we have solved that from the yesterday's meeting.
It is raining heavily here, almost everyday, and we have more wildlife, and the whole area is very green and beautiful, we just need to make a dam so that to keep wildlife here during the dry season, and other than that, everything else is going well and we really have some very beautiful trails to walk now.

We have not yet shifted the housing, we had someone who came from Arusha and he came up with a very expensive quotation, I think will send you that quotation.

Will update you again soon and will send you the full report soon as I won't leave to Arusha till we finish the other meeting.

Kind regards,

Hi,

Thanks again for a very full and complete report, you are good at this. I really very much appreciate your efforts with this shida, very upsetting to and me. We just want to get on with being a tour operator and use this area for Tourism.

You seem very busy with these meetings, were you able to meet are they having a nice time.

I talked to about the meeting with and Maanda. Maanda is now making threats to us. It is pretty alarming that she is saying these things, if she or her crew were ever caught attacking wildlife it would be very serious for her and them. At present this is just hearsay, we dont have any real proof unless as a witness who also heard her say these things.

Here is what I cut out of email to me, I wanted you to see first hand what stage Maanda is in, she could get dangerous, it seems she thinks she can get support, so be careful and with your team too.

"Maanda and Dismas from Dorobo's CRT came to visit me to talk about the ongoing land dispute regarding the purchase of the TBL plot. During the conversation, they mentioned that if TCL and the villagers didn't reach a settlement along the lines of those agreed by Klein's Camp and Moivaro at Ngorosoro (i.e. to return the title deed and to set up an agreement for bed night fees and such) that it was most likely a campaign would be waged against us in the form of intense cultivation around our borders to prevent the entry of wildlife and even direct attacks on wildlife along the lines of the very sad slaughter of large numbers of wild dogs in Londorossi a while back."

You will soon be returning to Arusha so please sit with and bring her up to date on your meetings, she can also tell you the latest on her end.

I look forward to your next report. Very nice to have email available to you.

Regards,
Dear [Redacted],

Things are going well here in Loliondo, the area is very calm today, after yesterday’s very long meeting.

We started the meeting at 10 AM and it went up to 5 PM and we had to stop because it started raining, we agreed to meet again this Thursday the 7th Feb.

The meeting was attended by the District Police Officer (he came to find out the complaints that 37 women walked from Sukanya to Loliondo), the Ward Executive Officer, Sukunya sub village chairman (though he was trying not to attend, the District Police Officer had to give him a call) and we had 109 people from the community.

The village chairman claimed that he had another meeting, so he did not attend.

We started the meeting by listening first from the women, and actually there was nothing new, they are just saying this was our land and we need it back because they don’t have enough land.

Another complaint was that we have been beating their children and we have been stopping their children from going to school (quite strange!)

The other one was that, we stole 7 cattle and sold them, so they want us to pay their cattle back.

The district Police officer told them and he told them that coming to [Redacted] is against the law as this is a private property, and if they want to get it back, they should go to see the President as he is the only one who can revoke the title deed. So he warned them that they should not break the law, by bringing in cattle forcefully.

He told them that, if at all they want to fight, then they should not fight with [Redacted], but they should fight with Tanzania Breweries Ltd.

They also failed to testify if there was any child beaten, and the one who were returned on the way to the school.

The whole picture showed that, there is definitely a brain behind them, that was pushing them to do such riots to us, so that they will capitalize on our reaction.

I have no doubt that Maanda is the one who engineered this, because his brother met the women at Loliondo and found them a place to sleep, because it was too late for them to walk back to Sukunya. I really don’t have an idea why she is doing this while she already know that she will never get this property.

My bet is she want to make this whole thing publicized so that her donors will hear it hence she can get herself more money from the donors to fight for the land, that she claim that it belongs to the community.
I will give you full details after the meeting on Thursday.

Re the change of the land use to Tourism, I did not meet the District lawyer to discuss this as I have been busy with clients and the issues from the community this is why I did not get time to see him, I will see him today.

The only thing he was complaining is that, some people have been calling him from Arusha asking him to write a face resolution, promising to give him 500,000 Tsh. He said some one from Arusha came to see him in his office at wasso, but I was surprised that this person never wanted to meet me so that I can at least know what is going on.

To him, he interpreted that these people wanted to trap him with anti corruption money so he said he don't want to deal with these people. He said too that he can not write a fake resolution as there is a possibility to back fire in the future.

I will talk to him again and we can see what we can do, the good thing is that the District Genera Council meeting did not reject the change of land use, they only talked about dividing the farm so that half of it will go to the community.

So to my understanding, he can now write a resolution to change a land use together with a proposal to divide the farm, which the Commissioner of land is not obligated to agree everything in the proposal from the village, and that way he can approve the change of land use and reject the land to be divided, because they also have to convince the government that they don't have enough land, and that is not true.

This is what I have for today.

Kind regards,

[Signature]

Hi [Name],

Please let me know the latest from your meeting on Monday.

Also did you hear if the land use was agreed to be changed for tourism. What was the final answer on that.

I will ask more about what happened in the Maanda meeting. Your comment about how she is trying to get 3000 acres was very interesting.

Thanks very much.

Subject: Loliondo Issues

Dear [Name],
This email follows the one which I sent you earlier about the problem of cattle from one boma near the property.

I think I told you that I sat with the Ward and the Village executive officer re those people, and that they decided that in the future we arrest them, and we convened another meeting on the Feb 4th.

But the following day, they brought so many cattle in the property early in the morning with no body grazing them, I decided to give a call to the village leaders before even I removed them, they told me to pick them up from Soit sambu village office and I did so.

When they came, we all went and started to remove the cattle and when we went to the boma, the warriors threatened the Ward and Village executive officer, I gave a call to the police who came and arrested them. [REDACTED] was there too waiting to go to pick up the clients from Wasso air strip.

After this, all the women from that boma walked to loliondo and stayed at Maanda's house, which now seems to me that this thing was arranged because the very same day the Arusha Region CCM Chairman was in loliondo, so from my perspective, they wanted to exagerate the whole thing about the property.

I contacted the village leaders and the District Police Commander who is going to be in the meeting tommorow, and I am thinking to discuss with them about not bringing cattle into the farm, and to set up a village by law against any one who bring in cattle into the property.

I got a call from the Newspaper journalist, and he was telling me something about us keeping a big chunk of land while the community is suffering from grazing, I told him that this is not true and he should atleast come himself and see rather than listening to stories from people. He also questioned about the purchase of the farm from TBL and told him that I am not in a position to talk anything about that because I am just an employee.

Shortly after the journalist call, Maanda also called and was asking about why the group of women walked to loliondo, I told her that I either don't know why, but all I know is that they walked and stayed at her house, I wanted to meet her so that we can talk, but she said she is in Arusha.

Infact last week, [REDACTED] called me and told me that Maanda was in her office at Olasiti and she was talking about us not letting cattle to graze in the property. She was with somebody from Dorobo whom I actually don't know who this person was. I think this is the time she was also arranging people to bring in cattle so that we react and tell the CCM leader that they were being harrassed, WHICH IS NOT TRUE AT ALL.

There is a lot of politics going on about the property, which I think it is being created by some people and NGO's who have their own personal interest.

This is all for now and I will update you more about the meeting tommorow.
Kind regards,
